TO THE STUDENT AT LEHIGH:

 THE CLOTHES WE MAKE ALWAYS FIT.

A brief line perhaps ; but it speaks volumes to those who have suffered in the hands of indifferent and incompetent tailors.

We have a lovely line of Choicest Fabrics, and we make them up at a figure compatible with the style and finish that stamps
a first-class garment.

Why Not Try Us?

SCHNELLER & SNYDER,

Merchant Tailors,

NO. 6 MAIN ST., - BETHLEHEM, PENN.

Our song seems to please, for our goods always sell; and as we constantly receive hearty encores from our customers the inference is that our Clothing and prices are pitched in the right key.

Stylish young men in particular find their kind here. They learned long ago that custom made goods are no better than ours, even if they do cost twice as much.

One thing there's not going to be any improvement on—giving a customer his money back when he is not exactly suited. It is perfect as it is. It answers all questions; solves all doubts. It is anti-friction and perpetual motion.

The best thing about it is: it kills off the merchant if he doesn't make the best clothing at the bottom price.

The best of all-the-year-round clothes, hats, shoes, and furnishings, and your money back if you want it.

PIONEER ELECTRICAL JOURNAL OF AMERICA.

MOST POPULAR OF TECHNICAL PERIODICALS.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD, weekly, is the largest, most handsomely illustrated and widest circulated journal of its kind in the world.

It is ably edited and is noted for popular treatment of subjects in simple and easy language, devoid of technicalities. No other technical journal has as many general readers.

THE ELECTRICAL WORLD devotes a large part of its space to alternating and multiphase currents—subjects that no student can afford to neglect, and which no other electrical journal in the world treats so fully—while the weekly Digest of Current Technical Electrical Literature gives a complete resume of current foreign progress in electrical science and its applications.

Subscription, including U. S., Canadian or Mexican postage, $3.00. Of Newsdealers, 10 cents per week.

Clothing and Furnishing Goods,

READY-MADE AND MADE TO MEASURE, FOR MEN AND BOYS.

In the Department for Clothing to order our large variety of foreign Suitings and Trouserings gives the fullest opportunity for selection.

The qualities of our Ready Made Garments need no especial mention.

The goods used are, almost without exception, imported materials of the higher grades. The cut is carefully revised each season to keep pace with every change of style; and even the smallest detail of trimming receives most particular attention.

Our Furnishing Department contains everything in the way of fine imported goods, and this season promises many novelties in the way of new shapes of Scarfs, Ties, etc.

Samples and rules for self-measurement will be sent on application.

Our location, one block from Madison Square, is convenient to the leading Hotels, and easy of access from the principal railway stations in New York and vicinity.

IN the name of the Class of Ninety-Five we present to the University and to its friends and patrons the XIXth Volume of the EPITOME.

It has been our endeavor to make the book a pleasing summary and a correct record of the past collegiate year, and to have it representative of the University in every way. The labor has been of that nature which makes effort a pleasure, and, as a reward for our work, we ask merely the appreciation and approval which we hope it deserves. With pleasure we have gathered all the glorious and happy events that have taken place in college halls and upon the campus, and it is with a feeling of regret and of sorrow, which is stronger and deeper than words alone can express, that we record the one sad circumstance which has befallen us in the death of our late President.

In the following pages there may be much to criticize, but we trust that there may be nothing found to condemn; and, should any part of the book be so fortunate as to win a greater praise than mere favorable acceptance on the part of those whom it is intended to please, our dearest hopes will be realized. It may be noticed that, in some respects, we have departed from the beaten path. We have made these unguided explorations into an unknown region in the search of improvement, and, unless we have greatly lost our way in a strange land, we feel that our ventures of this nature have not failed in their object. The quantity and quality of the literary matter have been given the consideration which their importance deserves, and the addition of the songs and the music has been made in the hope that they may some day be found upon the pages of a Lehigh song book.

We wish to express our thanks to all who have aided us in our work and, with the hope that the Ninety-Five EPITOME may be acceptable in the eyes of every son of our Alma Mater, and be considered a worthy successor to those which have gone before, we remain,

*The Senior has infinity
To limit all his thought and care.
“The world is mine—to get,” says he.
“I’ve only to begin—but where?”*

Senior History.

LONG in September, 1890, we started out as Freshmen, although there were some of us that had previously enjoyed so pleasant a year that the faculty allowed us to try it over. Some of us liked the start so well that we were also permitted to begin again the next time ; but that is getting ahead of my story, and then, those of us are no longer counted as part of us after all. We began in the regulation manner, and had our class meeting directly after chapel and elected Pop Underwood president, because we thought the biggest man ought to lead our fights against the Sophomores.

Under Pop's leadership we thrived, and took into our number many of our supposed enemies, whom time has proved our best friends. Although small in size, we made a good showing against a Sophomore class twice as large and had many wonderful experiences during our first few weeks.

Who can forget the sickly grin on Pop Bray's face that Founder's Day Morning, as he walked home from the New Street bridge with a coat of tar received in a hard fought battle against Soph. poster fiends? How high excitement ran those days, and with what pleasure do the participants in the rushes on the Triangle look back to those contests! We remember how we held our own until the wily '93 men pushed us out through the mud puddles under the electric light, where we soon fell victims to their savage attacks. We remember how flushed with excitement we were that day, when huddled in a trembling mass, we had our class picture shot on the steps of the Chemical Lab.; and how the plate by mysterious flights reached, at last, a snug retreat in the Iron Works, until it could be safely conducted to the photographer. Some of us went to the Freshman class supper, while some of us, not being allowed by Papa and Mamma to go, stayed home to study for those who went. However the studying for those who went did not take much effect, for many of our number left college in June, or took the year over.

None will forget that Saturday in November when we went down to Easton to swipe Lafayette for our first time.—30 to 0! And then we marched down the street from the campus to the station, singing the same old song which we have since sung again and again—the one consigning our unlucky rival to the depths of the Infernal Regions. What an innocent, pleasurable, studious life we led in those days; what interesting debates we had in our class meetings! We recall how our class crest was chosen by the chance falling of a cent, and how we changed our colors from gold and blue to the beautiful black and white.

One day we became Sophomores, and did our best with the ugly howling mob of youngsters that outnumbered us two to one. We must confess that they showed the lack of proper bringing up, but we have carefully strengthened their character by additions from our midst, and considering the vast number of them, we have done our prettiest. We took care to defeat them in the cane-rush one hot day in September. How that Freshman mass parted when Tommy and Van struck it! Ordway and the reserve did the rest, and '94 came off victorious in the last cane-rush at Lehigh. It was at the beginning and during this year that we lost several of our Freshman comrades; some remained in other classes and some are winning renown in other colleges too numerous to mention. Here it was that Henry Adams dropped by the way-side, a fell victim of Trig., that unceasing villain.

Henry had afforded us immense enjoyment, and, as a manager, might be styled a success—bringing our Freshman teams into prominent notice. Perhaps, for once in our lives we became big-headed and tried conclusions with the 'Varsity at base-ball. Of course the 'Varsity never played better, nor our team poorer, and we were obliged to succumb. But Henry went right on managing and at last managed to flunk out of college. Moorhead also left us to get married. At last accounts, he is braking on a freight train and has quite a family. Others have dropped out more or less gradually.

Somewhere along in here we have pleasurable reminiscences of seminary serenading and police courts. However we came out even, and the debt incurred at the trial is now all paid. It was at the close of this year that our friend Pete Balliet left us to go to Princeton. Our second year was a great success, and we all cremated Calculus in June, although a few of us took the "Re" in that subject in September. One member of our Sophomore class supper committee is still with us. Then we became Juniors and took in charge the Freshman baby, '96. It got along very well, considering our great care, and bids fair to outrival '95. We abolished cane-rushes lest our ambitious infant would go contrary to all college customs and win the cane-rush. There were substituted foot-ball and other mild games, in which it would be impossible for the Freshmen to seriously injure '95.

We took hold of the Junior German and let Dick Floyd lead it. It was a success, as was our EPITOME—at least the editors said so. They ought to know, because they wrote it, and read it, too. About this time the 'Varsity lacrosse team distinguished itself by winning the Championship of the United States. We celebrated the victories in due manner as became Lehigh gentlemen.

It was along in this spring one day that they shot Pete in the arm, down at Easton. Poor gray-haired Pete! He left us almost at the last, and we were sorry to have him go. However, between the Scylla of Electrics and the Charybdis of Mechanism he could no longer steer, and so bravely scuttled his craft, ere he should fall a victim to the displeasure of the gods. Not many of us flunked that time, and those of us who did are making it up now, or expect to before they graduate. Last June we shook hands with our dear friends and former enemies, the men of '93, and we now stand first in rank in the Lehigh University.

Our lot is a happy one and we are rapidly drawing on towards the end. We have lived together peaceably and will be as sorry to leave each other as we have been glad to live together. Many events of college importance have happened during our stay. One night a crowd of daring fellows painted the toll-house, and now they station a policeman there to see that we all pay. Our base-ball season, in which we defeated Pennsylvania so often, comes back to us—we remember getting over the celebrations and those sinusoid-like processions through the streets. They have completed a new place for the electricals to loaf in,—the only drawback is that it is farther to walk after dinner. We have had a successful foot-ball season and are victorious over Cornell, our ancient rival and recent conqueror. We have seen youthful classes photographed, and feast themselves in all conceivable manners, and at all possible hours,—testifying to the grand onward march of civilization.

But amid all these recollections, it comes upon us also to remember the form and figure of one who is not with us now—one who looked upon us when we were Freshmen, and cared for us throughout our Sophomore and Junior years. It is with great sorrow that we note the absence of President Lamberton from our midst. His death, early in September of our Senior year, has cast its shadow over our entire course. He is gone from us forever, but we have been much the better for his presence and kindly care over us.

Surely '94 is a thoroughly model class: For what better fellowship is to be found than among her civils? Where more scientific idlers than among her electricals? Where closer application to inaccessible subjects than among her mechanicals? Where harder workers than among her miners? Where more consistent bummers than among her chemists? For this and many other reasons we are truly thankful. We entered the smallest class for years, and expect to graduate the largest. Most of us are glad to be through and sorry to go: but when that last June morning comes, we all hope to stand, sheepskin in hand, upon the platform.

Gentle reader, drop a kind tear in memory of '94.

Junior History.

THE object which history should keep in view is not better shown than by the illustrious chronicler, Diedrich Knickerbocker. It is not so much to inform the present age, as to guard against a time when our successors "will neglect to treasure up the recollections of the past, and posterity will search in vain for memorials of the days of the Patriarchs." Any one of the present could tell what our class has done ; but unless a history were written, the future would be left without a knowledge of Ninety-five's achievements, and her record is far too satisfactory to permit a risk of its loss.

Two chapters of our history are completed. Another year has passed, and the time has come to add a third. Before going on, however, glance back for a moment over the pages already covered with the record of our past. They recall to mind the first part of our stay at Lehigh, and the thought of those days will always remain a pleasant recollection. One page tells of that morning visit to the Chemical "Lab." when a picture was so beautifully taken and the rest of the world remained in blissful unconsciousness of what was going on. On another page is the story of the last cane-rush. What a valiant struggle our class made, and by how little she was defeated, no one who was present can forget. Then comes our first banquet, a glorious feast, and all the more gratifying from the fact that it was held in the territory of the enemy, and under their very eyes. A little farther on we had attained the dignity of Sophomores, and there had devolved upon us, in our altitudinous position, the responsibility of teaching another class the ways of our University. The course of instruction was, as the Register expresses it, "eminently practical," and the result shown by the Columbian Day contest was entirely satisfactory—to ourselves. It would be useless to relate the details of these happenings. All this and much more has been written in the preceding parts of our history. Better still, it is written, in the memory of each man of Ninety-five.

At the time when this third part opens we were nearing the end of our Sophomore year. The minds of nearly all the class were occupied with one desire, one hope—the subjugation and consequent extermination of Olney, the Grand Extortioner of Math. and all his diabolic retainers. The campaign against him, although attended with many difficulties and involving a great deal of labor, was carried out very successfully. When Olney was finally seized, there were revived all the horrors of the Inquisition. The royal prisoner was brought before a tribunal, and not being able either to give any satisfactory reason for his conduct, or to produce a doctor's certificate, he was condemned to suffer the punishment of a violent death; and then was inflicted on him such exquisite torture as must have satiated the wildest and most extravagant desire for a horrible vengeance. His body was burned at the stake, and his spirit cheerfully commended to the lower regions by the High Priest and a jubilant crowd.

Our Junior year has not been a very eventful one. We have journeyed on quietly, and our ways have been ways of peace. We have not formed any deep-laid scheme for overthrowing the rule in our community, nor have we plotted the destruction of the borough. It is true, some of us were called before the bar of justice charged with inciting a riot; but it is hardly necessary to say that the accusation was entirely false, that our motives were cruelly misunderstood, and that great injustice, which is only too common, was done us by bringing such a charge. The thoughts of invasion and conquest which occupied our minds during the first two years of our stay here, have been laid aside. We are enjoying a tranquil life, doing all in our power to obtain complete satisfaction from it. Our serenity is occasionally disturbed by one of those unhappy remembrances of the past, which was "not passed," or by a remonstrance from that august body which has grown so fond and proud of us that our absence causes them immeasurable distress. But these little clouds do not remain long, and the sun soon shines again over our peaceful contentedness with all his former brightness.

For us it has been a period of intellectual progress. Much of our time has been spent in scientific investigation. We have made many additions to our store of valuable knowledge which so soon will form our capital in life. Literature has not been entirely neglected. During the first part of the year especial attention was given to oratory; and I doubt if so much eloquence was ever before poured out to the sympathetic walls of Packer Hall. We have gained much useful experience by our practical work in the different departments of technology. The effect of all this is to keep up our well-earned reputation for a high grade of scholarship.

As a class we have not made any startling efforts on the field this year. We have remained satisfied with being well represented in the various branches of athletics; and the honor of the class is ably sustained by her representatives on the foot-ball and other teams, and in the contests.

In other lines as great achievements have been made. A number of important positions in the musical organizations have been well filled by men from Ninety-five. And while commenting on the musical propensities of the class, I must not omit to notice the tuneful strains which may be heard coming from our section of the chapel on the occasion of any divine service; showing that not even the elevating influence of compulsory chapel attendance has been able to completely drown our enthusiasm in the direction of devotional music.

Society, with her proverbial fascinations for the Junior, has found many devoted followers in Ninety-five; and their offerings to her were gracefully received. The Ball, given in the winter by our class, was a very enjoyable affair—decidedly a social success. A more informal and unrestrained exhibition of the social spirit in the class was the Junior supper. At this third banquet, the usual festivities were entered into with all the heartiness characteristic of our class.

There is a part in the history of a class, not apparent to an observer. Our life here is more than a succession of gayeties and sports, of rushes, feasts, and games—events which come to the notice of the outside world. These are only ripples and waves ruffling the surface of an otherwise monotonous existence. Underneath the surface flows a current strong and steady, imparting to our class spirit a hearty vigor. It is a current of good-fellowship among class-mates, of reverence for the University, and of appreciation for our work—a current which forms a part of our college life, and is inseparable from it. No one who has not felt its influence can understand its power. And so, if to any reader our life seems aimless or frivolous, he has been deceived, mistaking the part he sees, for the whole, and overlooking the real seriousness which lies beneath an exterior of careless mirth.

In this way, the third year of our stay at Lehigh is rapidly passing away. Our Junior year will soon have turned from reality to a pleasant memory. And now, in bringing to a close this third chapter of our history, let me turn for a moment from my proper function, to see what kind of a future is waiting for us. It certainly looks bright and inviting. If the precedent of our past is followed in the rest of our course, we may look forward to it with satisfaction. If all the promise of the present is brought to fulfilment, we shall go from here prepared to do credit to the training we have received, and ready to make for ourselves a name in which the University can take a just pride.

 To see the cop is nowhere near.*

Sophomore History.

APPY the nation that has no history," says Montesquieu. And doubtless that remark is true for nations. But think what it would mean had it been, "Happy the class that has no history." For Freshmen of course it would be all right. But a Sophomore class without a history; shades of Mars forbid!

Ninety-six may not be particularly historic, but certainly we can furnish some gems of reading matter that would coruscate whether in paper covers or on tablets of wood and brass. For instance, a detailed account of our dealings with Ninety-seven would make most interesting reading; the many little acts of kindness we have done her, and the consideration we have always shown her, if properly pictured, would necessarily melt the hardest heart. Kindliness of heart is, indeed, one of the most striking characteristics of Ninety-six. That was shown at the exercises on the opening day of college. From the first, Ninety-seven had our sympathy; we felt for her, yea, and often reached her. We strove with kindly voice and gentle gestures of arms and legs to encourage her on her lonesome, friendless way. Surely if Ninety-seven ever reaches anywhere in particular, it will be largely owing to the good start she was given down the street on that first day. Again, in the games which were substituted for the cane-spree, our natural kindness showed itself. If it had not been contrary to college custom, we might have almost permitted Ninety-seven to possess and enjoy

“that much coveted cane.” As it was we watched with mild pleasure while her men won the foot-ball game, and it did our hearts good to see the innocent joy over the result depicted on their youthful countenances.

Then came the posters, another proof of our unflagging interest in Ninety-seven. Not content with giving ourselves as living examples of modesty and virtue, we graciously prepared at much expense of time and trouble a set of rules and regulations, with general observations on the proper conduct of a Freshman, which we carefully posted in conspicuous places so that they could not be missed. And all this free, gratis! Of all the days since Ninety-seven has been with us surely, “the flowers of each have been the moments when we met.” But never was this truer than on that beautiful October morning when the sun shone down on the old brown-stone guardians of the campus, and after all the strife, showed on them the white and green causes of the agony still untouched. The spirit of the long gone chivalric days was in that affair. One party waiting courteously the arrival of the other, while the auroral tints of breaking day lighted up the scene of coming action. What a picture, what a theme for poet or chronicler! And then when all has been arranged, the clash of the opposing factions in a glorious struggle! Truly, that was what the old chronicles called a “most gentle and honorable contention,” and it will be long, doubtless, ere any historian has the inspiration of such another scene.

Once more, at Ninety-seven’s first attempt at that popular form of tout-ensemble, the class-banquet, as usual we were desirous of lending a helping hand. But all our good intentions and well-laid plans were frustrated by the miserable police. Lined up eight strong on all sides of the hotel, with a skirmishing line of about thirty “specials,” it is no wonder that they, unlike the time-honored flowers that bloom in the spring, had a great deal to do with the case. Yet what a pitiable state of affairs it was: how Freshman-like a performance! College men in alliance with the minions of Dutch (in)justice. Ninety-seven certainly did herself, as well as Ninety-six, a great injustice by entering into that combination. We learned one thing, however, that night, of which we had never before dreamed—that the collection of bullet-headed numskulls representing the parody which passes for Law in these parts does have its utility. Protecting Freshmen and arresting Juniors, what an appropriate sphere of usefulness, and how eminently fit and proper!

We have overheard various inane, half-articulate wanderings to the effect that Ninety-seven had a class picture taken. Maybe it is so, quien sabe? Certain it is, however, that we have no "proof." It seems as though constant brooding over the subject has produced a kind of hallucination, to use a mild term, in the minds of those who make this statement, and that, therefore, it must be given little consideration. Anyway, Ninety-seven need not have been so reticent with regard to the affair, for she could have felt assured of our assistance.

Though largely engaged in matters, which while always showing generosity and proper spirit, are of less import, Ninety-six has also devoted time to more serious things. Twice within a year has the treasurer, at the behest of the class, like Curtius of old, dashed boldly into a large and elegant pecuniary hole for the benefit of the college at large.

One of the monuments, which we fondly trust will help to perpetuate the prestige of Ninety-six down the ringing grooves of change, is the Sophomore Cotillion Club. Originated and organized by members of Ninety-six, this came fairly into existence on the night of January 19, 1894, at the Sun Inn, Bethlehem, when a most enjoyable and altogether successful dance was given under its auspices.

Such things as these always speak for themselves, and of course they are mentioned here merely as matters of history. Essentially, we are a modest class, yet we are confident that while there have been, possibly, classes in former years better qualified to shine along certain lines, there never was and there never can be another class in which all the nineteenth century elegances are more gracefully blended with all the classic virtues than in Ninety-six.

Among the duties of the historian, the saddest of all is that of recording the death of a class-mate. It is with profound grief that we remember Albert Emil Braeunlich, Jr., of Hammondsport, New York, who died in South Bethlehem, on May 31st, 1893. By his death the University lost an earnest student, and one who would have honored her had he lived. Ninety-six lost a member who had endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact.

*The Freshman's ideas number one,
Like Moses and his wandering band,
Through hardships now he looks for fun
Since Cane-an is the promised land.*

Freshman History.

HAVING defeated our first enemy, the Entrance Examinations, we took our seats in Lehigh's beautiful chapel, on the thirteenth of September, with a feeling that the privilege had been earned. And as we looked about us, trying to read in the faces of our class-mates a prophecy of intellectual greatness, perhaps, or to see in their physical make-up a promise of future glory on the foot-ball field, there was a certain sense of satisfaction in the thought that we were members of this Class of '97.

The Freshmen's traditional foes were there too, and eyeing us with very different motives. One year ago, as their chronicles relate with an evident truthfulness which we pause to acknowledge, they "languidly sank down upon the soft velvety grass" outside, while waiting for the exercises to begin. And this word "languid" describes, with peculiar appropriateness, their later actions.

The remembrance of their own entrance experiences, coupled with a knowledge of their superior numbers, did, however, arouse them to some activity, and several impromptu rushes occurred, in which the honors were divided.

One of our banners on a New Street telephone wire started, perhaps, the liveliest of these rushes, and the banner remained in place until it was taken down by a lineman.

Later on, the posters and proclamations led to a gathering of the clans for battle, and their authors, well knowing that the regular edition would not see the sun rise, thoughtfully provided another set and marshalled out all their fighting men to protect them.

The next important incident was the taking of the class picture, which was done at the north-east corner of the new Physical Laboratory at ten o'clock on the morning of October 4th. One dreamy Soph. looked on from a window, but either the retrospect to their instalment plan was too painful by contrast, or his amazement was too great to permit him to act, for we were unmolested. The picture is excellent, and is the first one that has ever been taken at the new Laboratory.

On Founder's Day our class colors were announced, and, at the close of the morning exercises, the class yell was given for the first time.

Following the precedent of last year, the cane-spreed took the place of a cane-rush, and, as then, it consisted of three events—base-ball, foot-ball, and a tug-of-war. The base-ball game began at two-thirty amidst a scene of the wildest confusion. The long pent up feelings between the two classes had come to a crisis. From the start the Sophomores had the better of the game, and, thanks to the skill of last year's 'Varsity pitcher, whom they brought back for the occasion, the result was never in doubt. The game ended in the fifth inning with a score of 12—1.

During the first half of the foot-ball game neither side scored, the play being for the most part near the centre of the field—except on one occasion, when the Sophomores by short dashes pushed the ball within two feet of the Freshmen's goal line. Then it was that the prettiest playing of the game occurred. The Sophomores, although much heavier men, were unable in three downs to move the ball an inch through our line. In the second half the Ninety-seven men were "fresher," apparently, than their opponents, and forced the play nearly all the time. Finally, after a series of kicks and returns, they found an opening and placed the ball behind the Sophomore's goal line. Failing to kick the goal, the score stood 4—0, and remained unchanged to the end of the game. Ninety-seven had won, and each side had secured an event.

Then came the decisive contest, the tug-of-war. Too many men took part to make it a good pull, and lack of practice made itself evident on both sides. Owing to their greater weight, however, the Sophomores won this contest, and the cane-spree between Ninety-six and Ninety-seven was a thing of the past.

The crowning event of our successful career, the class supper, was held in the old historic Sun Inn, on the night of November 7th, and has the distinction of being the first Freshman class supper held in Bethlehem for many years. It was a complete success. The class assembled at the hotel without any interference and the enjoyment of the feast was not interrupted. The picture of the long table and the happy Freshmen surrounding it will long be remembered not only by ourselves, but also, doubtless, by the crowd of furious Sophomores outside, who were considerably permitted to view the scene through a window. Already they were enraged at our previous successes, but this was too much. "It was the last straw that broke the camel's back." Giving expression to their feelings in yells of disappointment and baffled rage soon became tiresome, and outwitted and crestfallen they soon dispersed. A few became desperate and were given temporary lodgings on Broad Street.

Taking a last look over these pages, we find that Ninety-seven, the smallest Freshman Class in many years, has won a foot-ball game from Ninety-six, secured a splendid class picture, eaten its class supper in Bethlehem undisturbed, and made a most creditable record in everything.

And now, classmates, let us not rest on our laurels, but push on with the same determination which has won them, until our names are inscribed upon the Roll of Honor, and we can leave Lehigh with a feeling that our work has been well done.

Synopsis.

WHEN the class of '95 entered Lehigh they found the students under the mastery of a spirit—the shade of Olney. His adherents, who had through their zealous efforts introduced his power into this realm, were still here in person to force all to submit to his will. Ninety-five struggled blindly for some time against this powerful enemy, and they gradually learned that the rule of Olney's spirit was becoming more firmly fixed year by year, and that the only conditions of escape were these: they must serve him faithfully for two years, digging forth treasures for him from his mines of Trigonometry, Analytics and Calculus. Twice each year they must bear back to his halls over roads (called “exams”) the treasures which they had obtained. Woe to him who had not worked diligently! Hope, ever faithful, left only those dangerous, yet speedy “horses.” Each journey seemed worse than the preceding one, and each time many fell. Certain “special” ones escaped; those who were freed after a year's work were called chemists. Those “classical” men whose minds were deemed unequal to the final task, the unearthing of the principles of Calculus, were liberated in January, '93. But the class, looking forward to the time when Olney should be overcome and when they should have conquered this spirit, determined to punish him. No torture seemed equal to that of the Spanish Inquisition; no death more fearful than burning at the stake, for we have endured a second Reign of Terror and a second '93. As then, the leader finally falls a victim to the populace he has menaced so long. Ninety-five, through her own noble exertions, is finally free.

Procession.

At 7.30 P. M. the Grand Inquisitor and his Court, followed by the infuriated Sophomores, with their victim Olney, and accompanied by their guests the Freshmen, proceeded from the Campus via New Street, to Market, to High, to Broad, to Main, via Old Bridge, to Third, to Delaware Avenue, to Dakotah, to Seneca, to Fourth, to Vine, to the place of trial on the Campus.

CREMATION.

Cremation Song.

AIR: "Mollie, and I, and the Baby."

THERE'S a college called Lehigh, and in it you'll find
Ninety-five, Courtenay and Olney!
And the former is bent on improving its mind
By wrestling with Courtenay and Olney!
Now, these two old fellows are chock full of tricks,
And a Sophomore lands in a deuce of a fix,
If his average is less than a bald-headed six,
In the struggle with Courtenay and Olney!

CHORUS:

Lehigh! Lehigh! Ninety-five! Lehigh!
Down with old Calculus! Show him some tricks!
Knock him out cold with a bald-headed six!
Ninety-five, Courtenay and Olney!

Now, many a Sophomore has dropped in the fray
'Twixt Ninety-five, Courtenay and Olney!
And our class, it has many an old score to pay
To those rascals, old Courtenay and Olney!
That Folium no one but they could contrive!
Just think of old A, B, C, D to derive!
Oh, happy the Sophomore who caught an 8.5!
In the struggle with Courtenay and Olney!—Cho.

But now we have downed them—in triumph we sing
Ninety-five, Courtenay and Olney!
Let the halls of old Packer with shouts loudly ring!
Ninety-five, Courtenay and Olney!
And many years hence, when we're old married men
With our babes on our knees, we'll impress it on them,
That a bald-headed six is as good as a 10!!
In the struggle with Courtenay and Olney!—Cho.

The Freshmen's Song.

[Words by F. A. DABOLL.]

AIR: " The Man that Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo."

OH, we're just fresh from Lehigh and its grand old Packer Hall,
And already in our path we have struck some rotten Math;
So we celebrate with you, who've drunk deeper of the gall
Which foul Calculus in bitter essence hath,
Which in concentrated essence Olney hath.

CHORUS:

If they come in view on the Avenue
With a most dejected air,
You'll be right if you declare
They're from the College there;
For they groan and sigh, and wish to die,
And they never wink the other eye,
Who at Lehigh take the Calculus of Olney.

Now, to Hades with great Olney, and the same with Courtenay;
Burn them boldly, never fear, even though there is no "Beer."
Your days of bondage over, you should evermore be gay;
And 'twere well to let the sport begin right here;
Oh, why not let the sport begin right here?—Cho.

But, alas! for we who singing are now in great elate!
Even now grim Calculo grinneth horrid as we go!
Oh, the limits without limit, and the integrations great,
The parabolas and all the chords of woe!
The differentials and the chords of woe.—Cho.

Our Triumph and Revenge.

AIR: “Coronation.”

ALL hail! the glorious victory won,
The spell dissolved at last,
||:The reign of terror now undone,
The tyrant bounded fast. :||

Behold the horrid visage grim,
The stern, relentless eye;
||:Ah, villain! now thy star is dim—
For mercy durst thou cry? :||

What, dost thou dare to chew the rag!
For clemency to seek?
||:A moment since we heard thee brag
Of victims slain this week! :||

Oh, look thou not for mercy here;
Thy fate read in this pyre:
||:Thy fiendish year shall cost thee dear,
Thy triumphs end in fire. :||

In Pluto's dreadful realms below,
“Where many mansions be,”
||:In deepest depths of ghastly woe
There's one prepared for thee. :||

And with the “temp.” infinity,
Or sev'ral thousand higher,
||:In concentrated SO<sub>3</sub>
May'st thou fore'er perspire! AMEN. :||

Athletics.

WE have become so accustomed to athletics in their present well-developed state at Lehigh, that we seldom take the trouble to look back and trace their gradual growth and progress. When we do this, however, we are impressed with the strong and steady advance of all branches of athletics ; and we cannot refrain from admiring and of making a passing mention of those who have aided in this progress.

Athletics of all descriptions seem to be the birthright of the American youth, and we are not surprised to find, as far back as 1870, records of athletic contests and games between class teams at Lehigh. Track athletics, however, really date their birth from the first meeting held by the Athletic Association in the fall of 1876, at Rittersville Park, long before the Athletic Grounds or Gymnasium were thought of. These annual sports continued at this place until 1879, when, in October of that year, the Athletic Grounds were formally opened.

In 1883, the long hoped-for Gymnasium was completed, and the first winter meeting was held in it. Since then the spring and fall sports have taken place on the Athletic Grounds, and the winter sports in the Gymnasium. Lehigh was admitted to the Intercollegiate Athletic Association in 1878, and this furnished a temporary stimulus to track athletics ; but for many years the interest gradually declined, until in 1892 it was reawakened, and now the meets are again becoming popular.

Base-ball is Lehigh's oldest game, and a 'Varsity nine has existed since 1875, while during the earlier years of the college, teams from all four classes held their championship matches. The first games with other colleges were played in 1885, when Lehigh lost every one of the seven games played, including two with Lafayette. In those days we usually fell an easy victim to the greater numbers and better training of our neighbor ; now it seems as if the tables have been turned upon our old rival, and she is the one who must bow to our more rapid advance and more sturdy growth. Slowly we passed all colleges of our size in this game, until, in 1892, we won two of the three games from both Lafayette and Pennsylvania, thus winning the State Championship.

In 1875, the annual foot-ball match between the Sophomore and Freshman classes was instituted, and for nine years this game slowly developed, and grew in popularity both here and elsewhere. The first season in which Lehigh took a prominent part was in 1884, when she lost four games, including two with Lafayette, scoring a total of sixteen points against one hundred and eighty-one scored by her opponents. From that time the game was developed and the team strengthened each year. Among those who fostered the early days of the game, and aided in its growth, were R. H. Davis, '86, and J. S. Robeson, '86, the latter being our first captain, and inventor of the V trick. In '87, '88, and '89, foot-ball became the game of all others at Lehigh, and her elevens ranked with the first four teams in the country. Series plays were instituted in 1888, when Walker, '89, captained the team. In 1889, foot-ball training was adapted in a more systematic manner. The team of that season, captained by S. Warriner, was the strongest that Lehigh had yet possessed, and won the State Championship, defeating Lafayette and Pennsylvania. The team of this year contained P. J. Dashiell, who did probably as much as any one to introduce interference and to perfect defensive play; it also included such men as Blunt, Rafferty, and Coates, who by their playing and example did much for Lehigh's foot-ball. In 1890, the rapid, snappy play, for which Lehigh is noted, was first introduced, and many new methods and tricks developed. The teams of '91 and '92, captained by Blunt, '92, and McClung, '94, respectively, were not as brilliant as the team of 1889, but were far better trained, and developed the material which constituted the strong team of '93. This eleven, captained by Ordway, '94, was perhaps the strongest and most consistent team we have had. It was defeated by none but the teams of Princeton and Pennsylvania, and ended the season easily fifth place in the foot-ball arena.

Lehigh was admitted to membership in the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association in 1888, and steadily advanced from third place in that year to second in 1889, and to championship in 1890. But it must not be supposed that the game reached its development in those few years. As early as 1884, a team existed in college, and the first game was played with Stevens in 1885, which we lost 4 to 0. In 1887, Arnold K. Reese captained and trained the team, and the improvement was so rapid that in 1888, we were admitted to the Intercollegiate Association. Previous to this, two or three games were played each year, of which Lehigh lost the greater number to her more experienced adversaries. During her first year in the Association, Lehigh won two of the four championship games; while in 1890, still captained and trained by Reese, '89, the team defeated Stevens, Princeton, and Johns Hopkins, winning the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Championship of the United States. The team of '91 was defeated only by the Hopkins team. During this and the following season, the game was very much developed by the example and playing of such men as Banks, '93, Gjertsen, '92, Semple, '92, Mosman, '92, and others. Last spring, Lehigh, under the excellent training of Capt. Symington, again won the championship, defeating the strong teams of Stevens and Hopkins.

Tennis has never been popular among the body of our students, and while it had long before been adopted at other colleges, it was not until the fall of 1883 that a college tournament was held at Lehigh. The following year we joined the Intercollegiate Tennis Association, and entered representatives in the tournament. In 1886 Lehigh won the State Intercollegiate Championship, in both singles and doubles, at the tournament held in Philadelphia; and also the Championship of the Southern States, at the tournament held in Wilmington, in the same year. From that time tennis has existed in a torpid state, and it has been within the past two or three years that the college has awakened to the benefits and pleasures of the game. In 1893, the new courts in the Athletic Grounds were made, and at present enthusiasm for the game seems to be increasing.

Thus have athletics at Lehigh developed hand in hand with the college itself, in a strong, steady progress. From the smallest of beginnings, we have surpassed all colleges of our size in foot-ball; our baseball team ranks high; and in lacrosse we stand first in the country. It is impossible to predict what the future will bring forth, but at present Lehigh holds a decidedly enviable place in the athletic world.

Lehigh Musical Organizations.

MUSICAL Organizations at Lehigh date back almost as far as the college itself, but for many years were of no importance in the student world. Tradition tells us that there has always existed a college choir, but it fails to state where it produced its melodies before Packer Hall was built. Indeed one authority gravely states that the first organ-blower was "Willie," but it does not say where the organ was placed. We are led to suppose, however, that this organ was situated somewhere in Christmas Hall, which was itself an old church altered to suit college requirements.

The University Glee Club came into existence in 1876, along with the many musical and other societies with which the patriotic college man filled that year. For a time it was a success and then suddenly died out, or rather split up into several clubs and class quartettes. The next organization to appear in the round of musical progress was the Orchestra, which started, in 1883, with seven instruments, under the leadership of J. McK. Graeff. Its sphere was limited, however, and although it became a success musically, yet it did not grow popular nor prominent until it entered the Musical Association, and took part in the concerts given by that body. The Glee Club first became of importance in 1884, when early in that year, it gave its first concert, under the leadership of J. H. Wells, '85. The entertainment was held at the Sun Inn in aid of the Tennis Association, which was then struggling into existence, and was such a success that it was repeated the next month at Mauch Chunk. This latter concert was the first effort of the Glee Club outside of Bethlehem.

The next appearance of the Glee Club was in April, 1885, when, in conjunction with the Mustard and Cheese, which originated a short time before, it gave a successful performance at the Sun Inn. The Orchestra took part, for the first time, at this concert.

The Banjo Club first appeared before the public in December, 1885, at a concert given by the Mustard and Cheese and the Glee Club; it then consisted of but four performers, Messrs. Rathbun, '86, Booth, '86, Howe, '86, and Ogden, '87. Notwithstanding the favor with which the Glee and Banjo Clubs were received, they relapsed into a dormant state shortly afterwards, and did not appear again until 1887, when the Banjo Club was reorganized under the name of the Lehigh University Banjo and Guitar Club. At the same time, a brass band was organized consisting of thirteen pieces. This organization, however, shortly disbanded, being of no great use to the college nor comfort to the members themselves. The Glee Club experienced one of its periodic bursts of activity, and in conjunction with the Orchestra, Mustard and Cheese, and Banjo and Guitar Club, gave a very successful performance at Lehigh Theatre (now the Rink) in February, 1888, for the benefit of the Athletic Association. After this success the clubs disbanded again as was their custom. The next year they gave two concerts, one of these in conjunction with the Mustard and Cheese.

In 1890 the Organizations gave two concerts in Bethlehem and one in Easton. This season was, up to that time, the most successful one in the history of the organizations, Potter, '90, managing the Association; Gibbs, '90, leading the Orchestra; and Mr. Wolle, leading the Glee Club. At the concert given in Bethlehem in May, 1890, the song "The Brown and White" was first rendered by the Glee Club, and at once became a great favorite.

Two concerts were given in the early part of 1891, one in S. Bethlehem and one in Allentown. In the fall of that year the Orchestra reorganized in great strength under the leadership of G. Pettinos, '87, the Banjo and Guitar Club was lead by Dr. Fetterolf, and successful concerts at S. Bethlehem and Hazleton were arranged by the manager, H. Adams, '94. In the same year the Musical Associations assisted at a concert given by the Lehigh Minstrel Association.

The fall of 1892 works the complete reorganization of the Musical Association, and the beginning of its present prosperity. The Orchestra was disbanded, as it was found to be impossible to take it on the concert trips because of the expense. Chas. E. Pettinos, the present leader of the Banjo and Guitar Club, accepted that position, and by his faithful and successful efforts won the appreciation and thanks, not only of the club, but of the entire college. It was in this year that E. Ferriday, '95, assumed the management of the Association, and drew it from its dormant state into its present activity. During the season concerts were given in many of the large cities of this State, the clubs being everywhere well received and entertained. Mr. Hallock's specialty, which has since become so popular, made its first appearance this year.

The present season has seen the increasing popularity and greater success of the Musical Organizations. The Banjo and Guitar Club has won the reputation of being one of the best in the country, while the Glee Club has become very popular. During the last Christmas vacation the first extensive concert trip was taken by the Clubs; six concerts were given, and at many of these the Alumni assisted materially in their success.

The Association is now comprised of thirty-two members, and is without doubt the best that Lehigh has ever possessed. The clubs are well led, and well managed, and Lehigh has every reason to be proud of her Musical Organizations.

Lehigh Publications

Lehigh Publications.

IF we would obtain a correct idea of the progress of a nation or community, we must study its Literature, and this fact is likewise true of a college. Nowhere can we find such distinct traces of the development of this great University as in its magazines and newspapers. When the college was in its early years, and the number of students small, no publications appeared; but as the attendance increased, a college paper became a necessity.

The first publication was the Lehigh Journal, started in the fall of 1873, by the Class of '76, and was edited by members of that class alone. This paper was a monthly, and was about the size of the present Burr. It lived but a little over a year, and then not receiving the support of the students, died out in 1874.

The oldest of the existing publications at Lehigh is the Epitome, which was published for the first time by the Class of '78, during their Sophomore year. At a class meeting it was decided to publish an annual, and a committee of three, the first Epitome board, consisting of H. F. J. Porter, Milnor P. Paret, and Frank P. Howe, was appointed for the purpose.

That November the book appeared and created a sensation in college; it contained the class histories, a list of fraternities and clubs, and the class teams—in all about fifty pages. It was bound with paper covers, and had a few rough drawings. The book, along with the college, was in its first stages, and together they have developed and increased.

Slowly the Epitome became larger each year until the Class of '83 was obliged to increase the board of editors from three to five men. They still agreed, however, with all previous boards, that they "did not expect to produce a work of much literary merit," and that therefore they offered the result of their labors "with feelings of much anxiety." In spite of the increased board, however, the Epitome retained its old shape, and contained little more than statistical matter.

Thus, it will be seen that our college passed its early years without the enlightening rays which emanate from a college newspaper. The statistics contained in the Epitomes were invaluable, it is true, yet more was demanded; there was wanted a paper which would contain college news, amusement, reform and editorial comment. It was "in response to this long felt want" that the Lehigh Burr came into existence in October, 1881. The Literary Society elected the first board of editors, which consisted of Chas. C. Hopkins, '82, J. D. Ruff, '82, R. R. Peale, '83, H. B. Douglas, '84, S. D. Morford, '84, and A. P. Smith, '84. These men took hold of the matter in the true Lehigh style, and the first number of the Burr carried the idea into the minds of its readers that it had come to stay. The reason it was named the Burr is best told in the simple, modest words of the editors: "Because it contains all that is good—and it may not be sat upon with impunity." The Burr was then a monthly publication, and after a few struggles with the faculty and students, it settled firmly into its place of usefulness in the college life. Early in the second year of its existence, Richard Harding Davis was elected to the board, and in that volume are to be found his "Tales of a Freshman," which have since been collected and published.

In 1885, it was decided that the Epitome was a book of too great importance to be entrusted to the Sophomore Class for publication and accordingly, it was voted a Junior task. But in order to arrange it so that the Class of '86 should not be burdened twice with editing it, the Epitome of 1885 was published by the college. This is a landmark in the life of our annual, as with that volume its present greatness began; it was larger, handsomer, and in every way the superior of all previous publications. The next year the Juniors assumed control of it, and from that time forth it advanced with long annual steps towards its present beauty and completeness.

Late in 1885, the first number of the Journal of the Engineering Society appeared. This publication was devoted exclusively to engineering subjects, and was issued quarterly; it contained also abstracts of the proceedings of the Engineering Society, and selections from papers and communications read before that body. This periodical was issued for four years, and then, in 1889, it suspended publication because it was no longer supported by the students.

The Lehigh Quarterly was founded, in 1891, by the Senior Class. The first board of editors was composed of G. S. Hayes, F. C. E. Lauderburn, P. M. Paine, H. K. Landis, and H. H. Davis. This magazine was devoted to engineering topics, being practically a continuation of the Engineering Journal. It seemed to thrive for a time, but soon lost the support of the student body, and in 1893, was obliged to suspend for lack of funds.

The latest arrival upon the Lehigh literary arena was the Brown and White, a production of this year. It was founded in January by its present board of editors, and is already one of our literary fixtures. The Brown and White is a four page college newspaper, issued semi-weekly, and was originated for the purpose of putting into the hands of its readers, promptly, all Lehigh news, together with facts of general interest with regard to other colleges.

Thus it may be seen how journalism at Lehigh has struggled and conquered. Several periodicals have failed, it is true, and others have died away, but at last the matter has adjusted itself. We have now our annual, the Epitome; our literary magazine, the Burr; and our newspaper, the Brown and White;—a happy combination. With these three to occupy and ornament their respective spheres, the future of journalism at Lehigh seems to be bright and promising.

Editors of THE EPITOME.

Gentlemen :—

It gives me pleasure to comply with your request to say a few words with regard to our late lamented President, Hon. Robert A. Lamberton, to appear upon the pages of THE EPITOME for this year. Having been one of his predecessors in office, and his temporary successor now, I am perhaps the better able to judge of the work which he accomplished so successfully and so admirably. The statistics of his life have appeared in many forms, and indeed it may be said that, for one who accomplished so much, he had a very uneventful life. Born in Carlisle, in 1824, a graduate of Dickinson College, a lawyer in Harrisburg, a volunteer in the trying days of our Civil War, a member of the Convention for the drafting of a new Constitution of the State, an Episcopalian by belief, and one of the principal officers of the Diocese from the time of its formation. Such form the story of his life. He was appointed a Trustee of the University by Judge Packer, in 1871, and shared a great portion of the Judge's confidence. A Free Mason who had attained to the very highest honors possible in that brotherhood, he was one of the most popular men in the State, among those who knew him so well. The consequence was that when he was appointed, in 1880, as President of the Lehigh University, he brought to that office not only a clear head and a just judgment, but a large gathering of people who sent their sons here because he was the President. Highly respected in the community, and thoroughly capable as an administrator, he supervised the large schemes of development and increase which had been projected by the Trustees, and will always be associated with the upbuilding of the institution in edifices, departments, and appliances of all kinds. A courteous and just man, he treated his colleagues with great consideration, and was ever ready to carry out their schemes for the development of the University; but it is more germane to our purpose to consider him, as he was, the friend of students. While always recognizing the exact character of their deeds, not blind to their demerits, his heart was warm to save them from the results of their own evil doings. All those who were under him here remember him with affection and respect; and his virtues and excellences pass as a cherished tradition to those who have come and will come after his death. If it be of prime importance that the President of a University, whatever his gifts and powers may be, should also be a model to students that they may safely copy, then the high character and Christian conduct of Dr. Lamberton present themselves as worthy of the imitation of the students. After thirteen years of unexampled labor, in the latter part of which he felt the approaches of illness, he died, on the first of September, 1893, leaving a void in the lives and hearts of the community which will be long unfilled. To himself, it was a happy release. "Mark the perfect man and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

Very sincerely and faithfully yours,

Solo :—

Now such a day can come to all
 In rain or sunshine clear,
 In summer's heat, or any month,

 It strikes you like the cholera,
 When happy and most gay,
 But grins will freeze upon your jaw
 The dawn of that cold day.

Chorus :—

That cold day, that bitter day,
 That freezes up your blood.
 Between your chattering teeth you say
 Your name is surely Mud.
 Your cash is gone in poker debts,
 You find you have no friends,
 Your best girl turns to other pets,
 When that cold day descends.

Solo :—

The great have felt its temperature.
 Napoleon had his hour;
 The Silver men are shivering yet;
 It made old England sour.
 But surely we have one escape
 When Gabriel's trump shall call.
 The black sheep in that hour will find
 The hottest day of all.

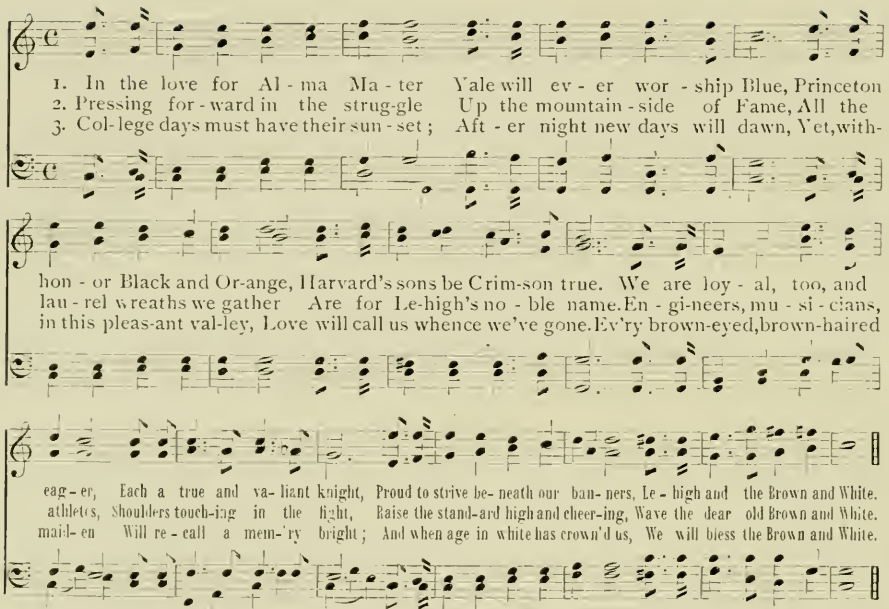

[After this verse, all throw open their coats and act as though very warm, mopping their brows with handkerchiefs, etc., and sing :]

Chorus :—

That hot day, that boiling day.
 Oh! how we shall perspire.
 Oh! how we'll groan and leave away
 In piling up the fire.
 Old Nick will wag his tail and smile,
 With nothing else to do,
 But ask us every little while :
 "Is it hot enough for you?"

A Song.

---

LAUGH and we laugh,
Weep and we weep with thee :
All the unruly sea,
Covered with foam and chaff
Or with dark wreckage strewn,
Still followeth the moon—
Laugh and we laugh,
Weep and we weep with thee.

If thou wilt sing,
Thy little song will be
In our poor memory
A memorable thing,
When thou art far away ;
Nor are the times so gray
Nor sore our sorrowing
But we may laugh with thee.

But when thy song is sad,
As it may sometimes be
When lovers disagree
And all the world turns bad,
Let us in some low seat
Sit silent at thy feet
Till thou again art glad
And we have wept with thee.

It has been our aim in bringing The Bumblepuppy before the public to edit a paper of high literary standing. A few more editors are needed, but in order that the literary excellence of the paper may be preserved, no one having spent less than three years in each college year in his course is eligible to the position.

The more time a man puts on a subject the better he must become acquainted with it; and as our aim is perfectness we must enforce the above requirements.

We are glad to announce the enormous increase in circulation of the Bumblepuppy, and the consequent prospects of a brilliant future. Only yesterday a 1400-doo of the Sandwich Islands, ordered 10,000 copies—to be shipped at once—as he finds we have the hottest paper in America and exceedingly good for fuel. We feel sure that with such a circulation of this edifying literature throughout the island, great changes will be wrought, and the inhabitants speedily brought to an elevated stage of civilization.

We hear that a number of seniors are thinking about graduating this June, in spite of our advice to the contrary. We have learned that no man is capable of grasping the great number of ideas sprung upon him in four years, and as we all wish to leave here with a perfect knowledge of our subject, we again expostulate with those unwise youths and urgently beg of them to consider the fatal step, accept the advice of those who have learned by experience and take another year.

A STARTLING DISCOVERY.

Many eminent Doctors and scientists have lately been thrown into a state of excitement by the discovery of an animal hitherto unknown. To what family it belongs is the question they are trying to decide.

Some declare it is of the bird species, since it resembles the goose in many particulars, while others claim it to be a mammal of the genus equus, which seems probable, as it has many characteristics of the mule. It has been named the Damphoul, and the most perfect specimen has been found by the Professor of the mining course, in whose room it may be seen on any day in the week.*

*As we go to press, we learn that the animal has made its escape.

Feast of Troy.

IT may be out of place in a volume of this description to take account of an incident belonging to such remote history as that of the Siege of Troy ; but inasmuch as Homer, in his well-known article upon that subject, neglects to mention a scene of much importance in the completion of the world's history, we here record it in full detail, hoping that our researches into the past will be appreciated by all our literary critics. Those who have read the Iliad will remember that after the great Hector had been sent to Erebus upon his last shop visit, Achilles granted a twelve days' holiday to the Trojans. And it is of one of the merrymakings and feasts, with which this peculiar nation were wont to celebrate the death of their heroes, that we wish to tell.

The Trojans knew that if the Greeks learned of the feast, they would do all in their power, consistent with the terms of the truce, to interrupt and spoil it. Therefore, the head chiefs informed their men of its whereabouts but an hour before they were expected at the rendezvous ; and about five P. M., one day, they stole softly in Indian-file amid the tin-cans and old rags of a narrow thoroughfare, on through the kitchen, and assembled in small and close, but safe rooms on the third floor of the Temple of the Sun, where the banquet was to be celebrated. After a brief pause of about five hours, which had been previously arranged for the purpose of stimulating the appetite, and which was employed in playing cards and checkers, sleeping on the floor, or reading the Troy newspapers, the gallant band formed in hollow squares and marched down into the banquet hall.

Meanwhile, the Greeks had discovered how the wily Trojans had outwitted them, and were gathered in a howling mob outside the portals, striving by all means in their power to gain admittance. It would be allowing Homer too great a handicap were we to omit the Gods in this narrative, and although our hearts plead for the honor of the Trojans, still we must allow naught but the truth to have full sway.

Sympathy for the Trojans and a proviso of "No supper, no pay" in their contract with them, induced the Gods to protect the Trojans against their enemies. Accordingly, they were present in full force, their blue blouses and brass buttons appearing to advantage upon the bodies of Teutonic build, which the Gods had assumed for the occasion. The tumult grew apace, and one bold Greek cut the wire which carried the light, as he thought, into the banquet hall. The cut was his twenty-fifth, and as the light in the bar below flickered and went out, and the affrighted Greeks poured up stairs as if late to a math. recitation, the unfortunate one realized that he had cut once too often, and in despair, gave himself up to the authorities. As he was being marched to Olympus, which being translated means "the jug," he remembered that his captor, one Mike Apollo, was attracted by "sparkles," so he artfully slipped out of his coat of glittering armor, and leaving it in the hands of his dazzled keeper, quickly disappeared into the crowd.

But we are progressing too fast in our history. Long before the languishing Trojans had completed their five hours of penance, the Greeks had discovered the trick and had scoured the avenues of Troy, picking up those careless Trojans who had not gone to the "Sun" in time. These were bound and carried amid awful imprecations to a castle in the neighborhood, and placed with unconscious irony in the ice-house ; and it was not until late in the evening that the unfortunates were released upon parole.

Scarce had the party of kidnapping Greeks returned to the scene of action, when one of their number drew down upon his helmeted head, by his untimely remarks, the terrible anger of Mercury, who darting out into the multitude, pursued with flying steps the object of his wrath. Now although this God, with his winged shoes, was invincible in air, yet when it came to carrying the Pennsylvania Dutch body, which he had assumed, around a trolley-car in the streets of Troy, the youth he was pursuing was more than his equal. So after encircling the car several times, amid such cries as, "Now you see him, now you don't," the wrathful God gave up the chase, and contented himself by seizing a quiet bystander and dragging him off to Olympus.

The unhappy youth who was thus captured was tried, with several others, after the manner of the Gods. This consisted of standing before Jupiter, who with a glass of nectar purchased by Greek fines by his side, and with his jovial face lighted up with the eagerness of the chase, commanded him to "Kish der Buch." Then Apollo with a few tones of his lyre, so delighted Jove, that he commanded the mortals to be restored to Earth upon the payment of several pieces of silver, which, of our money, is about five dollars.

While this scene was being enacted in the higher strata of heathen antiquity and ignorance, the banquet among the mortals, assisted by Bacchus, who stood club in hand at the window, was waxing joyous. Toasts and speeches were made ; and one especially upon "Troy as I found it" contained such mathematically and rhetorically correct and delicate wit, that the speaker was compelled to desist because of the great mortality among his hearers. A chieftain of a neighboring tribe arose amid the awed silence of the Trojans and began, "This is a great class from the looks of things——"; but at that moment an indescribable odor filled the hall, and the words were lost in the loud grumble of the fumes as they stole into the casements from the street below.

A wily Greek, thinking to break up the feast, had imported a hand grenade, and had set free the contents among the Gods. And as those haughty warriors stood grimly by, many a tear could be seen shyly casting its reflected ray into the naughty world about, as the subtle, soft-stealing odors brought back to each hero fond recollections of the chemical Lab. far past Calypso's isle and across the dark waters. But not so the Gods. Their shining morning faces were transformed in their terrible severity, and the great thunderbolt was prepared. Jupiter rose in his wrath, and poising aloft the mighty weapon, began to read : "All good citizens are commanded to go to their homes, etc. etc." Not a man stirred, and it was not until it became evident that all citizens, good or bad, would be "pulled," as it was termed, that the Greeks dispersed and retired to their tents.

Thus ended the Feast of Troy. Later on, the Trojans were escorted safely to their homes by the Gods ; and long before Phoebus had begun to lend his red beams to aid in the artistic work of the mortals, the warriors were cradled in the arms of Morpheus, the Greeks seeing sweet visions of future revenge, and the Trojans suffering nightmares from their overindulgence at their glorious feast.

Sherry Dan's Slide.

UP from the South at the break of day,
Bringing to Bethlehem fresh dismay,
The affrighted air with a shudder bore,
Like a herald in haste to the student's door,
The clanging of Packer Hall bell once more,
Bidding the student make haste to the fray,
And chapel twenty minutes away.

The clanging continued with greater vim
Kept up by the tireless hand of Jim ;
And louder yet into Bethlehem rolled
The roar of that old bell uncontrolled,
Making the blood of the student cold,
As he thought of the stake of that momentous fray,
And chapel twenty minutes away.

But there is a road from Bethlehem town,
A good broad highway leading down ;
And there, through the flush of the morning light,
The student ran with eagle flight,
And with him his steed of black and white,
As if he knew it's necessity
In fighting the battle with old Olney ;
The toll man yelled in vain that day,
With chapel fifteen minutes away.

Still sprang from those swift feet thundering South,
The dust, like smoke from the cannon's mouth,
Or the trail of a comet (for equation see book) ;
The cops stood and looked with a wondering look
At the nerve of the student, who no time took
To say " By your leave ;" but hurried by,
Leaving the cops to wonder why
The heart of the student knew no dismay,
With chapel a full ten minutes away.

Under his spurning feet, the road
Like the narrow Kneehigh River flowed,
And the landscape sped away behind.
For the first time old Bethlehem to fastness inclined ;
And the youth, like a bark fed with furnace ire,
Swept on, with his wild eye full of fire.
But lo ! he is nearing his heart's desire ;
He is snuffing the smoke of the roaring fray,
With chapel only five minutes away.

The first that the student saw were the groups
Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops ;
What was done ? What to do ? a glance told him both.
Then taking a spurt, with a terrible oath,
He dashed down the line, 'mid a storm of huzzas ;
Jim opened the door to find out the cause
Of the yells, and the whoops, and the mighty applause.
The student dashed past in a beautiful slide
While the storm of applause was continued outside.
With dust and with dirt the brave student was gray,
With a flash in his eye, without fear hear him say :
“ My pony and I can't be beat any day.”

Then hoo, rah, ray ! for horse and man !
And che-he, che-ha ! for the race they ran !
And when their statues are placed on high,
Under the spires of old Lehigh,
The American student's Temple of Fame,
There, with the glorious student's name,
Be it said, in letters of Brown and White,
“ Here is the steed that saved the day,
By carrying the student through the fight
From Bethlehem,—twenty minutes away ! ”

The Combat.

OUTSIDE, the rain was beating its tearful protest against the ivied walls of the Gymnasia, and the usual Saturday clouds drew ever closer their sable mantle about the Camposum, as if to shut from view the dark deeds which were even then taking place within its borders. As we enter the Gymnasia, a significant scene greets the eye. In one corner, reclining in the arms of a comrade, rests a tall figure. He lies with head thrown back, gasping eagerly for the moist tainted breeze which comes from a drill card in the hands of a friend. Another stands by him, and intermingles his words of caution with deft strokes of a wet towel, now and then tightening the gloves or the belt of the warrior. Around about gleams the circle of eager faces, while ever and anon comes the hollow rumble of the balls in the tenpin alley beyond.

So fresh, and so fair ! But even in those ancient days, public opinion was the only faculty which ruled the honor of the individual : and these two combatants must fight to a finish, to decide where the fault lay.

"Time's up," says the Secundus ; and the two rush toward each other for the twentieth time. Nineteen times before had they met thus, and nineteen times had the corridors rung with the clang of five ounce gloves upon yielding visage. But never before a round like this. The warriors struggled and gasped as though the innocent gloves were ponies in a Math. exam., and the cries and plaudits of the populace swelled louder than the mirth of a class-room joke.

But suddenly all became still, the ruddy faces of the warriors whitened, and their hands fell to their sides, weak and nervous. What is the cause ? Has compulsory chapel been abolished ? No, the great Praetor Smithus has appeared upon the scene, and the struggle must cease. A calm disdainful smile lights up that proud patrician face, and his fiat goes forth,

"Mark ! ye must cease. More cannot be done !"

SCENE.—The CZAR's room on the fourth floor of Packer Hall. Time : 11:20 A. M. (The CZAR upon his throne. Freshman German Section reciting before him).

1ST. FRESHMAN :—MR. F——, what is the meaning of this sentence —? (Starts to read.)

MR. F. (interrupting) :—Be quiet. We have no time for such things. I am here only to keep this class going during the hour. Mr.—— will give me the declension of das Bier, which reminds me, by the way, of something which happened to me in Germany. (Starts a reminiscence.)

(There is a loud knocking at the door of the room.)

1ST. FRESHMAN (rising) :—Please, sir, may I be allowed to open the door?

MR. F——:—No! Keep your seat. It is nothing but those rowdy Juniors. Pay no attention to them at all.

(Knocking continues.)

* With apologies to Schiller's Wallenstein——Die Piccolomini.

2D. FRESHMAN :—Shall I open the door, sir, if you please ?

MR. F——:—The next man that speaks I will have expelled from college. Don't mind that noise. Those Juniors will be quiet enough during the next hour.

(Knocking grows louder, and a well-known voice is heard, recognizing which, the CZAR hops from his throne, and hastens to open the door. Enter DR. U. J. D., very angry and much excited.)

Enter JUNIOR CHEMISTS, METALLURGISTS and MINERS in lively discussion, which is kept up for a long time while all seat themselves.)*

MR. F—— (looking over the roll) :—Mr. Ph—ps.

CHORUS.—Here ! Here !! Here !!!

MR. F—— (absent-mindedly marking in roll book).—Mr. Ph—ps, absent.

JO. PH—PS (happening to hear him).—Look y'here, Mr. F——, don't you give me an absence. (Going up to the CZAR's throne.) You gave me one last week.

MR. F——:—Yes, Mr. Ph—ps, I did.

JO. PH—PS.—Well, I was here that day, and what's more I'm here now.

CHORUS (from all sides) :—That's right, Jo. You were here, sure. Don't let him bluff you. Talk right up to him, Jo. He can't scare you, etc., etc.

MR. F—— (rapping on his desk) :—We must have less noise here, gentlemen.

(Loud and prolonged applause.)

MR. F——:—Does anyone know where the Electricals are ?

B——:—They are having a snow ball fight, I guess.

MR. F——:—Well, the time is up. Mr. Dssszdsszszssdz—immele can begin to read.

Z———MELE (in a stage whisper):—Where's the place. Some one lend me a translation.

(There is a loud noise in the hall and heavy banging on the door. Cries of "Let us in F—rgy." "It's cold out here." "Shake it up, old man," etc. Racket continues and increases until MR. F———opens the door in person. Enter ELECTRICALS who have just arrived from the Physical Lab. by a circuitous route.)

CHORUS OF ELECTRICALS:—Good morning, Mr. F———. Why didn't you let us in sooner. What's the matter this morning. (They surround MR. F———in a corner.)

MR. F———(above the din):—You can all come in, gentlemen, but you all have absences.

BR—WN:—It's an outrage. You are treating us like children. It's a long way from the Physical Laboratory, and it's bad weather besides, and more than that we were detained by the Professor. What do we get absences for?

MR. F———:—When a man comes fifteen minutes late I must give him an absence.

CHORUS OF ELECTRICALS:—Oh! Is that all. We'll fix that all right. Don't you worry about that, Mr. F———. Everybody sit down. This is our section.

(All seat themselves. Work starts again.)

WH—TE:—It's too hot in here.

(Goes deliberately to the door and opens it.)

MR. F———:—Mr. Wh—te, you are entirely too fresh.

(Howls and yells on all sides.)

KAP—LA:—That's pretty good.

MR. F———:—Did you make that noise, Mr. Kap—la?

KAP—LA:—What noise?

MR. F———:—Leave the room, sir. We must maintain order here, gentlemen.

(KAP—LA starts to remonstrate.)

MR. F——— :—Don't let us discuss the question. If you have anything to say, Mr. Kap—la, come after the hour. (Exit KAP—LA).

(Some one sings "Daisy Bell.")

MR. F——— :—Did you make that noise, Mr. G——— ?

G—— :—No, I did not, but I am very sorry to disappoint you, Mr. F———.

MR. F——— :—Leave the room, sir.

G—— :—What for ?

MR. F——— :—For laughing, sir.

BR——WN :—I say, why do any of us Electricals stay at all. We all have absences.

CHORUS OF ELECTRICALS (rising from their seats) :—That's so. Let's all go. Good-bye, Mr. F——— (Exit ELECTRICALS.)

JO. PH—PS (rising) :—Mr. F———, in the absence of a quorum I move we adjourn.

MR. F——— :—Sit down, Mr. Ph—ps, you are out of order.

JO. PH—PS :—You're off, Mr. F———, a motion to adjourn is always in order.

MR. F——— :—Well, Mr. Ph—ps, since you have moved to adjourn, you can leave the room, sir. (Exit JO. PH—PS.)

L—EB (rising) :—Why, if that's a way of getting out, I second the motion.

MR. F——— :—This is going too far. You may leave the room too, Mr. L—eb.

CHORUS :—Good work.

(All start to go.)

MR. F——— :—Keep your seats, gentlemen. We have exactly two minutes and a half before the bell rings——

(The 12:30 bell rings. Exit all remaining JUNIORS.)

MR. F——— (continuing) :—You may go on with the reading, Mr.——— (Looks up and finds himself alone.)

CURTAIN.

To Packer Hall.

---

SLOPING upwards from the river,
Farthest up the hill of all,
There the sunlight with a quiver
Gilds the spires of Packer Hall.

Packer Hall, that like a mother
To her sons, extends her hands,
Gives them presents worthy of her,
Fame to win in many lands.

May she, like the Roman matron,
Asked her jewels to display,
Show us to the curious patron,
Saying proudly, "These are they."

May we all win present glory,
Gain the wreathes that Fortune weaves,
May our names shine out in story
Bright as the autumnal leaves.

May we shed increasing lustre,
On the college dear to all,
Brighter than the leaves that cluster
On the stones of Packer Hall.

Queer.

Now doesn't it seem rather queer-o,
That to register ten,
We've things "colder" than when
The mark that's recorded is zero.

YES.

NAY bend your head a little nearer,
Let me look in your dear eyes ;
See your lovely face, the dearer,
In this hour of my surprise.

If I had the pen of Poet,
Then perhaps I might portray,
How that little word—you know it,
Changed my night to brightest day.

Some may eat of lotos flowers,
Dream of fancied Paradise.
Let me dream away these hours,
In the sunlight of your eyes.

Should I through the realms of Spain,
Or the lands of Romance go,
To me comes but one refrain :
“Sweetheart—Oh—I love you so.”

A Paradox.

“O H! Mister Buck,” the student cried.
“I wonder if you’ve ever tried
To guess the difference between
That sign and your old mowin’ machine.”

“Why as for difference, I pass,
For don’t they both keep off the grass?
They are alike, or else I’m stuck.
I give your riddle up,” said Buck.

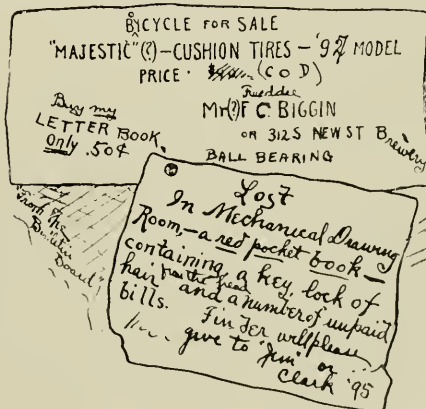

“The Campus, Buck,” the student said,
“Loves not the sign, but feels instead
So awfully cut up, while for Machines the grass just pleads for mower.”

The joke was lost on Mr. Buck,
And such on all may be its luck.
The moral ought to be most plain,
If not, just read it once again.

I ALWAYS doubted the report
Which marked the Lehigh man a sport,
But now it's very plain at last,
That this is why they call us fast.

Though these swift rides have raised a fuss,
They do not beat the "horse" on us,
Our reputation is at stake,
So next trip let them use the brake.

Trip of our Glee and Banjo Clubs.

WHEN those jovial and erratic organizations, our Glee and Banjo Clubs, set out on a barn storming expedition, they proceed to put themselves very much in evidence from start to finish. Beginning by burying the Lehigh Valley Station beneath a mass of overcoats, dress suit cases, banjo and guitar cases, and other paraphernalia, they immediately institute a round of revelry and hearty good-fellowship which is ended only by the brakeman's cry of "Souise Bessle-em" on the return trip.

As each arrival adds his mite to the already imposing mass of luggage on the platform, he is greeted with much warmth and cordiality, especially if he has a pack of cigarettes or a tobacco pouch concealed about his person. Before setting foot on the palatial private car, which the Clubs have learned to love so well, our spiritual leader, Charles Edward Pettinos, raising his hand to ensure perfect silence, invites the men to join him in repeating that sublime invocation to the Chief of the Weather Bureau,—"Ei yi, ve domdt zeit, guck a mol do, der Lehigh;" and as the men stand there with bare heads, chorusing this appeal fervently and earnestly, the impressiveness of the occasion is said to be unequalled. To make assurance doubly sure, however, and to ward off any foreboding thunder-shower which may have escaped the previous ceremony, a committee stands by the car steps to see that every man places his left foot on the car first, and simultaneously murmurs rapidly that charming bit of verse, "She sells sea-shells."

Once in the car, all solicitude concerning the future state of the weather vanishes, and every one arranges himself as comfortably as possible, while our genial manager, Edward Calvin Ferriday, proceeds to jolly the conductor. Edward is of a very economical turn of mind, and regards railroad expenses as a necessary evil; he once expressed regret that so diminutive a personage as Bob Taylor should travel on a pass, "for," said he, "if only a larger man had it, I could buy a half ticket for Bob." With banjo music, singing, card-playing, and reading, time passes so quickly that our destination is reached before we have even given it a thought, and we pile out, eager to find our hotel and to explore the town. Our manager sternly rebukes some of the lazier and more luxuriously inclined men, who suggest the advantages of a cab over walking, and informing us that the hotel is only two blocks distant, seizes his luggage and heads the procession.

Alas! for our trusting simplicity. The hotel was in truth only two blocks from the station, but there was another route to it which was twelve blocks longer, and it was over this latter course that our relentless manager piloted us, for purposes of advertisement. When we reached the hotel, twenty-five minutes later, streaming with perspiration and with our tongues hanging out, our distress was so great that Billy Whildin and Jim Budd lay down and besought Death to end their sufferings.

The announcement of dinner instantly revived us, however, and we would have enjoyed the meal thoroughly, if we had not been compelled to endure, in shamefaced silence, the sad spectacle of Eddie Miller's flirting with the pretty waitress; or had we not been shocked by the proprietor's asking us what kind of tin-cans we would like to feed Hallock on. After being peremptorily ordered to appear for rehearsal at four o'clock, we were turned loose on the town, which we immediately proceeded to occupy.

The afternoon passed without incident worthy of comment, except the narrow escape which Payne and Quigley had from two infatuated ladies who chased them for over half a mile.

As soon as supper was finished, we went to our rooms to dress; and as one man after another discovered that he had thoughtfully left behind some vitally important article of raiment, the scene became more and more spirited, and reached a climax when Billy Hall discovered that his bottle of hair restorer, without which he never travels, had leaked all over the bosoms of his dress shirts. His thoughts on the subject were so beautifully worded that it seems a pity they were unfit for publication. Peace was restored with difficulty, but at last we were all equipped and started for the opera house, where everything went smoothly until the intermission, when George Lehman took advantage of a temporary lull in our watchfulness, and tiptoeing stealthily to the centre of the stage, informed the astonished audience that he intended to play a solo on his bass banjo; a panic instantly ensued, but before any serious damage had resulted, Johnny Gibson and Bosbyshell made a dash for the ambitious George and dragged him from the stage, his coat being almost torn to shreds in the struggle. During the second half of the concert, Harned boldly stepped forth on a somewhat doubtful encore, and walked almost to the footlights before he noticed that the rest of the Glee Club did not intend to respond; upon making this painful discovery, his agitation became so extreme that he could scarcely regain the shelter of the wings, and when he reappeared amongst us, he looked as though he had just escaped from a horrible death.

When the Glee Club had sung the last number on the programme, the audience heaved a sigh of relief that caused the building to settle fully two inches out of plumb, but they dispersed in an orderly manner, dissipating at once any fears as to our personal safety, which we may have had; and we proceeded forthwith to the Alpha and Omega club-rooms where we were entertained most hospitably. So well, indeed, that Johnny Miller played a solo on the mandolin with a Chinese coin for a pick, and discoursed pleasantly all the while to the admiring onlookers; while "Kitty" Whitmoyer quietly went to sleep on the divan, having first convinced himself and the rest of us to his own entire satisfaction that he was in his room at the hotel.

When we arose the next morning, sadder but wiser men, we were assailed by pangs of remorse, and as our appetites were rather poor, most of us thought we would not eat anything till dinner time. Imagine then, if you can, our anguish when we learned that our thrifty manager had arranged for our departure at ten-thirty, and that we were not due at our next stopping-place before three in the afternoon. With tears in our eyes, we begged him for dinner, but he was inexorable, and amidst the general excitement, Fletch Hallock and George Womrath wandered off, and not until just before train time did we discover them ravenously devouring two railroad sandwiches, and muttering incoherently to themselves. Grave doubts were entertained as to their sanity, but we tenderly cared for them, and before we came to our journey's end, were overjoyed to see that they were themselves once more.

Our next concert went off much better, and we were entertained afterwards at the University Club ; however, we hesitate to say very much about what transpired that evening, because " Kansas " Miller and " Burp " Hall threatened us with instant annihilation if we dared to even breathe of the hip-hurrah time they had. And then, besides, opinions differ in the latter instance ; that is, " Burp's " opinion differs from the rest of the Clubs'—he claims to this day that he was perfectly sober.

But, as we all know, "life is not all roses," and it was with a certain feeling of relaxation and gladness that we boarded the train on Sunday morning to return to South Bethlehem. And be it said in praise of the strong constitutions of the men on the Clubs that we had sufficient surplus energy, when we stepped from our car at the Union Station, to give two or three rousing Lehigh cheers before scattering to our various rooms.

A Sad Case.

A N athlete bold,
So it is told,
Once struck a man of timid mien ;
And by his look,
The former took
His victim for a freshman green.

He was not tough,
Nor big en-ough,
But yet instructor was his rank.
But, all the same,
—— worked his game,
And now his V lies in the bank.

A Juvenile Romance.

I.

THERE once was a lad who was young,
And, just as all poets have sung,
In love he fell deep,
For want of more sleep,
He braced up the nerve in his tongue.

II.

He sought out his sweetheart to be,
Declared his great passion. Said he :
"The bottomless pit
My deep love would fit,
It's great breadth would fill the whole sea."

III.

"My heart beats for you, dear, alone,
Without you it must turn to stone.
But if you can be
My queen," offered he,
"Why, then, it will do for a throne."

IV.

He clasped his poor hands in despair,
What else could he clasp but the air ?
"O ! give me some hope,
Or some piece of rope.
I'll hang myself over a chair."

V.

The maid could not stand this harsh threat,
She's holding him back from it yet.
If, ever some day,
You get fixed that way
You won't hurry either, you bet.

Innocence at Home.

IT was only a few days before Xmas when Freddie arrived home for the holidays. His pride knew no bounds as he stepped from the train; and while he attended to his baggage, the dignity, which he tried to assume as becoming a college man, was very amusing, and, to a knowing observer, would have marked at once the freshman four months old.

His importance received a rude shock, it happened, when the baggage master, who was an old acquaintance, greeted him.

"Hello, Freddie. Glad to see you back again. Where have you been?"

"O! I'm just home for the Xmas vacation," Freddie explained. "I am up at Lehigh now, you know."

"Is that so? Well, well, still goin' to school, are you? Some people never gits done goin' to school, it seems," was the unappreciative reply.

To school! Freddie, from his freshman point of view, was disgusted to find that the difference between a college man and a school boy was not more plain, even to the uneducated, and on the way from the station, under the inspiration this indignity has given him, he delivered quite a lecture on ignorance to his younger brother who had come to meet him. That individual listened in awe with proud and wondering eyes, and finding appreciation here, at least, Freddie's dignity had quite recovered its normal state when he entered his father's house. But here again it was sadly crushed, for the "college man" became merely "little Freddie" when his mother's arms were reached.

"Why didn't you come home sooner, Freddie?" his fond mamma asked. "The term closed a week ago, didn't it?"

"Yes, ma'am, but I staid to hear the Packer Hall Chimes."

"What are they, Freddie?"

"Why, there are chimes in the tower of one of the college buildings, called Packer Hall, and according to Judge Packer's will, they are rung only once a year on Xmas eve, and I was going to stay to hear them. But when your telegram came, I asked Prof. Myers about it, and he said that some students had stolen the clappers out of the bells, and so they wouldn't ring this year. So I came home right away then."

"What a pity!" said his mother. "The bad boys to keep the chimes from ringing. You wouldn't do such a thing, would you, Freddie?"

"No, ma'am, and that's not all. The Moravians, up there, come over, they tell me, and play trombones on the campus all night."

"Play trombones. What's that?"

"I don't know exactly," said Freddie. "But I guess it's a game like tenpins, like in Rip Van Winkle, you know. I hear it's fine. I'm going to stay and see it next year sure."

After this revelation, Freddie's father arrived home from his office, and the family sat down to dinner.

"Well, my son, how do you like it up there?" the old gentleman asked.

"First rate!" said Freddie. "I tell you it's a fine place. But you have a hard time at first until you get on to things. I was pretty green at first, but I know a thing or two now. You know they haze awfully up there, but I have escaped all that somehow. It must be because I look and act older than most freshmen. Why, a senior was once taken for me."

"Your father tells me you have written asking permission to join a fraternity, the—the—something or other," his mother remarked.

"The Alpha and Omega," Freddie replied.

"Yes, that's it. Tell us of it."

"Well, first let me tell you that it surely is a great place for frats up there," Freddie began. "There are lots of them. Most of them take in fellows early in the year, but the Alpha and Omega always waits for a time to pick out the best men from a class. The other frats are mighty jealous of it for that reason, and so the Alpha and Omega has to be more secret than the rest. They haven't a frat house like most of the others, but yet the nicest fellows in college belong. The membership is secret, too, and so secret that some one once tried to make me believe that there was no such thing as the Alpha and Omega, but I know better, for one of the Alpha and Omega men, who was rushing me, showed me a memorial window in chapel that the fraternity had put in some years ago. There was no doubt about its being their window, for I saw the $\mathcal{A}$ and $\mathcal{\Omega}$ on it myself. You will let me join, won't you, father?"

"We shall see about it, Freddie. I have written to your president asking his advice," his father answered.

"That's good," Freddie went on. "Prexy will tell you all about it. He's a mighty nice man. I found that out one day when I went to see him to ask him if he knew of a washerwoman I could get."

"Your report was not very good, Freddie. Why didn't you pass your examinations?" his mother said, in the way of a mild reproval.

"Well, the fact is," the "college man" explained, "the exams. were harder this year than ever before. More fellows flunked out this Xmas than you can count. I passed English and Essays, and that's more than lots of fellows did. But I have the dandy plan about Re's."

"What are Re's, Freddie?"

"I mean re-examinations. You know they always make you pay five dollars to take one after you fail the first exam. Now, you see, when you have a lot it will cost a good deal. But I came over in the train with a fellow who said his name was Buck Ewing, and who has been at Lehigh for three years, and he put me on to a dandy plan. Someone had told me before that you can get six Re's for $25, if you paid it all at once, but Buck Ewing says that isn't so any more. They have a new plan now. You can go up and give Prexy $50, and that will guarantee you all the Re's you will ever need in your whole four years; and what's more, after you have paid in your $50, the faculty can't refuse to grant a Re, like they do to lots of fellows. I guess I'll work that scheme, if you'll let me, father."

"That might be a good business arrangement," his father said. "But we shall see."

"That fellow in the train told me lots of things I never knew before," Freddie continued; "I think I'll have to go in for some of the prizes he told me about."

"Prizes! How can you win any prizes when you have so many conditions, Freddie?" his mother inquired.

"Why, of course, I can," Freddie insisted. "Let me tell you about it. You see they have a fund up there called the Fund for Indignant Students, and this is the way it's run. All the five dollar bills and other money that they take in on account of Re's, goes into the Fund. Now, you know, there are prizes given in the freshman year, for first in each study, and in the sophomore year, a big one, for first in everything. Of course only a certain few fellows get these prizes each year, and all the rest are disappointed, and some of them are pretty mad, too. That's why they call this fund the Fund for Indignant Students. You see, it wouldn't do to have too many fellows mad. It would hurt the college spirit. So they have to give sort of consolation prizes like in tennis, and these come out of the Fund. Now the way these prizes are won is by guessing who will win the prizes in studies. Every man in college can, if he wants, go and put in his guess with the faculty, and then it is managed just like the press slips in guessing the order of the base-ball clubs in the League when the season opens. You can put in your guesses as late as Easter, and then the competition closes. Then in June the fellow that has guessed the prizes all right gets a big prize, and there are other prizes, too, ranging from $25 down, which go for other good guesses. I think I can win one of these prizes from the Fund for Indignant Students. Why, Buck Ewing says he won $55 in his freshman year."

This explanation was for a time too much for the family's comprehension, and the first remark that followed came from Freddie's mother.

"Why, Freddie. I am surprised that college professors should do such a thing. It's as bad as the Louisiana Lottery."

"But, you see, they have to do it," Freddie explained. "And then it's very secret, too. Not even everyone in college knows of it. That fellow Buck Ewing told me lots. By the way, father, I will need fifteen dollars more on my allowance when I go back in January. Buck says that your pew rent for your seat in chapel is due on the 15th of January. And, mother, while I think of it, I bought a white sweater on my way home, and I want you please to work me a nice, big, square L on the front of it. I tell you it looks fine, and not many fellows in college have one."

"What is that big key, Freddie?" asked his little sister, as he drew his key ring from his pocket.

"That. Oh! I must tell you about that," said Freddie. "That's a key to the fire escapes on the college buildings. Every fellow needs one in case of fire. You have to deposit five dollars if you get one from Prexy but I got this one from a fellow who flunked out and who didn't need it any more. I was pretty lucky. I paid him only a dollar for it, and I can sell it any time when I leave college."

"I wonder why they have such a large key," inquired his mother, who was now examining it.

"I'm sure I don't know," said Freddie. "Unless it is to make it harder to lose than a little one. And that only goes to show what a fine place Lehigh is. Everything up there, is just like this key, just as it ought to be. I tell you it's grand to be a college man at such a place."

The result of one term's study in our excellent English Course.

Before.

IN my towers by Fancy builded
On the shores of Hope's deep sea,
In bright robes of tinsel, gilded,
Fortune sits and waits for me.

Shall I draw aside the curtain,
Meet that softly beaming glance,
Which, though disappointment's certain,
Will bewitch me and entrance?

What could my impassioned pleading
Do against Fate's stern decree,
That a barrier, unreceding,
Rears between my love and me?

After.

WELL there ! you see the lights at last have died,
And I—at least, I did my very best
To be triumphant over Fate, I tried,
And miserably failed. So let it rest !

I hoped for, lived, and struggled for this hour,
It had a different ending in my dreams,
And one must struggle on, though storms may tower,
The curtain falls—and failure certain seems.

And one may live, and one may love forever,
Unheeding always when stern Reason calls ;
But there !—I'll do my best, and give up never ;
I'll play my part until the curtain falls.

A Common Complaint.

WORK, work, work! In Olney, in Courtney, and Wood.
Oh, that my tongue might utter the thoughts that I wish it could.
Oh, well for the Freshman child
That he dabbles in easy "math,"
Oh, well for the Chemist wild
Who a positive "dead roast" hath,
But my "Exams" come on
In a horribly long array,
Six weeks and I'll be gone,
For that will be judgment day.

Then work! work! work! In Physics, in Math., in Gym.
I'm glad that my tongue can't utter more words for my parting hymn.

GRAND DUKE (angrily).—Who are the reprobates?

SECRETARY.—Bose, Jerry, and Billy.

GRAND DUKE.—Ho, a set of sluggish youths! My lords, what think you of this grave offence?

FIRST DUKE (rising slowly).—Grand Duke, according to the sage, Pythagoras, who wisely said that “numbers are the principle of things,” and from my learning in those abstract realms, I would infer that in this case the symbol of their conduct should be z-e-r-o, and that of punishment, infinity.

SECOND DUKE.—Yea, my lord, thy words are true. The offence is grave. Expel the villains from this place forevermore!

THIRD DUKE (excited).—That's right, sir! That's right, sir!

FOURTH DUKE (nervously jumping up in a chair).—Such punishment is not enough. The deed is more. 'Tis treason to rebel against these sacred laws—To jail, to jail with them, and ne'er more let—

FIFTH DUKE (much excited and wildly gesticulating).—No! No! 'Tis not enough! Off mit zer heads—off mit zer heads!

(Meeting breaks up in great confusion. GRAND DUKE tries to restore order, and amidst the uproar can be heard his commanding voice.)

GRAND DUKE.—My lords, you are all too excited to reason. These offenders are deserving of nothing more than expulsion, which I hereby name as their sentence.

SCENE II.

Castle Hall. 2 00 P. M., same day. Enter three culprits.

BOSE.—Haste, comrades, let us see what on yon bulletin board is writ.

(Rush up to read. Dead silence follows.)

BILLY—Ah, is it come to this? What foul Fate has thus decreed?

JERRY.—'Tis by the hand of that accursed council.

BOSE.—Revenge must then be our requite!

JERRY.—Hush, hush! These walls have ears. This is no place to voice such sentiments. To-night behind these castle walls we'll meet again!

SCENE III.

Behind castle, 12 M. Enter three offenders.

JERRY.—Now, let's arrange some plan of sweet revenge.

BOSE.—Aye—what revenge can be too great for this foul deed!

Would that their spirits were consigned to that place "from whose bourne no traveller returns."

BILLY.—Death were sweet revenge indeed ! But how can we this bloody deed arrange ?

JERRY.—List to my plan. In yonder town have I a friend who makes a subtle powder, which touched with spark of fire would blow this castle into air. A keg of this we will bring forth, and by industrious work, we'll dig a passage way beneath the council chamber, and once the keg is there, the deed is done.

BILLY.—Good ! Good !

BOSE.—Let's to the work immediately.

JERRY.—To-morrow night we'll meet again. Be here with implements of work, and when the council meets next Monday morn, our work will be completed.

Now let us haste away,
Before the dawn of day
Our secret will betray.

Act II.

SCENE I.—Friday night. Work well under way. Enter BILLY and JERRY from underground passage.

BILLY.—This work doth my anatomy make tired.

JERRY.—Well said. Thy thoughts and mine are in accordance ; and, yet, this treacherous deed will bring us sweet revenge !

BILLY.—Marry, had I conceived the task so hard, far from my purpose 'twould have been to undertake this agricultural work.

JERRY.—But I wonder what delays our comrade, Bose, who with the keg of powder is now due. The clock strikes two, which makes him one hour late. Three nights ago, the keg arrived—forthwith, he hid it in his chamber, and was to-night to bring it to this place of action.

BILLY.—Has some foul fate o'ertaken him ?

JERRY.—Listen ! Dost thou hear the rustling of the leaves ? Lo, there he comes !

BILLY.—Aye, it must be he, and yet he comes without the keg. What, have our thoughts been true ?

JERRY.—Look ! look ! That is not Bose. Bose does not walk with that ungainly stride. Quick, hide behind this tree. It may be the astrologer, who spends his nights in yonder tower. (Enter DAN.)

JERRY (whispering).—Why, 'tis the man they all call Dan. What purpose brings him here at this unseemly hour ? Look, he walks toward the hole, and if he should perchance fall in, then is our plot discovered, for he will run away in flight and tell it far and wide. (DAN, wrapped in meditation, falls in.) Quick, run and intercept Bose with the keg ; and I will fill Dan's ears with likely stories. (Exit BILLY.)

JERRY (running up and catching DAN).—What in the name of Bratton's wig doth bring thee here ?

DAN (struggling to get away).—Let go ! Let go of me !

JERRY.—Thou fool, dost thou not know me ?

DAN.—Aye, I might have known thee, for none else could be so vile, and none do I despise so much as thee. I say, let go, or I'll—

JERRY.—Not so, most noble Daniel. Thou dost me wrong, for not a hair of thy head shall I offend. I like thy righteous way, and fain would be as good as thou.

DAN.—What ! is it so ? Is thine heart changing ?

JERRY.—Aye. Verily !

DAN.—Then amen ! (Gets out a Bible to read, and lights a taper.)

JERRY (aside).—This fool is going too far. I must cut short this nonsense. (To DAN) Prithee, put out thy light. This is no time to read. List, I have a thing of great import to tell thee. Thou hast just come in time to share with us great wealth.

DAN (greatly surprised).—Dost thou say so ? What ! What is it ?

JERRY.—If I tell it thee, wilt thou swear by the name of Mrs. Lucas that thou wilt not disclose the secret ?

DAN.—Aye, I swear by all that is holy—even by Sam Randall's face.

JERRY.—Thou swearest by something rich, Well, to the secret. Hast thou not heard beneath these castle walls there is a mine of gold?

DAN (dropping his Bible in amazement).—Gold! Dost thou say gold? Hast thou found any yet?

JERRY.—Not yet; but if thou here wilt work with us, we will within two days have it discovered.

DAN.—Then, with all my heart, let us to work. (Exit into passage.)

SCENE II.

(On hill by brewery near castle. Bose rolling keg. Enter BILLY running.)

BILLY.—Hello, comrade, why tarriest thou?

BOSE.—What trouble brings thee here in such excitement?

BILLY.—I've come to stay thee with the keg, for Jerry now doth entertain a bold intruder, and so to take it there might well betray our secret.

BILLY.—Here, let's hide it in this cellar, where other kegs are stored, and none wilt it discover.

Act III.

SCENE I.—In underground passage. JERRY and DAN in conversation. Sunday night.

JERRY.—Yet but an hour or two, and we'll as rich as Nabobs be, for if we find one pound of gold, we'll find a million. But the keg should soon be here, so that we may explode this covering rock, and see the glittering gold.

DAN.—But will there not be danger to the castle?

JERRY.—Not one foundation stone will be displaced. But lo! they come! (Enter BILLY and BOSE with keg.)

BOSE (nervously).—Is all ready? Is the fuse prepared?

JERRY.—'Tis done. I have a clock and battery which we shall set at 11.30 A. M., and by this mechanism, a spark will be created, the fuse ignited, and the deed is done.

BILLY.—The deed lies heavy on my conscience. I fain would give it up.

DAN.—What ! give up this gold ?

JERRY (to BILLY).—Would'st thou play the coward ? Nerve up and be a man !

BILLY.—I would I could give up, but I am settled, and “bent each corporal agent to this terrible feat.”

DAN.—Why, 'tis not so terrible to get this gold, thinkest thou ?

BOSE.—Come, come ! No more of this useless parley. Let's open the keg, and set the fuse.

JERRY.—But how to open it is more than I can tell.

DAN.—Come, 'tis easy to pull out this cork. Give me a chisel !

BOSE.—Fool, dost thou not know a cork from bung.

BILLY.—Yea, thou art more the fool, Bose, for who e'er saw a powder keg with bung !

BOSE.—But bung it is, I swear by Thacker's beard. Dan, dost it not come out ?

DAN.—Hubble ! Dubble !! Bubble !!!

JERRY.—Zounds !

BILLY.—Great Cæsar ! Art thou killed ?

BOSE.—'Tis a strange kind of powder !

JERRY.—Passing strange ! (Examines keg.) Ha, ha, why Bose, do not thy scented nostrils smell familiar odors ? What trick is this ? Art thou aware that this is beer ?

BOSE.—Beer ! Why no, whence comes this keg no beer is brewed !

BILLY.—True, but beer is brewed on yonder hill, and in yon cellar beer is stored.

BOSE.—Aye, there's the rub ; this keg and ours must there have been mistook.

DAN.—Or rather purposely was took, because thy stomach craved the appetizing draught. Dost thou not know 'tis wrong to drink and steal ? Besides, we wait in anxious mind to blast this rock !

JERRY.—Hush, Dan ; and Bose, thou reckless cuss, dost thou not know a keg of beer from powder ? Make haste ; return at once, and seek the powder keg !

BOSE.—Well, let's to, and have one draught before we go. (BOSE, who is equal to all emergencies, produces a hose, and inserting it in the keg, begins drinking.)

BILLY (grabbing BOSE by back of neck).—Thou sot. Wilt thou suck there all night. Give me a whack. (Drinks.)

JERRY.—Well, if both of you must drink, then I must needs take one. Billy, come; drain not the keg, but give me chance to drink! (Drinks.)

DAN (much disgusted).—With bellies filled with beer we ne'er will get this gold. Come, Bose, and hurry seek the powder!

BOSE.—But one more drink! (Drinks.)

BILLY.—And one for me; but Dan must join me first, before I'll go.

DAN.—Persuade me not. My lips have ne'er been touched by such vile stuff.

BOSE.—No man's a friend of mine unless he drinks. If we this gold will share with you, thou must share drinks with us.

JERRY (aside to DAN).—Come, Dan, let's take one drink, for 'tis our only chance to get them off.

DAN.—Well, if I must, I will.

JERRY.—Now thou art a man. Come, Billy, let our comrade take the hose!

DAN (drinks).—Can this delicious draught forsooth be beer? (Drinks again.) What! have I wasted all these years in total abstinence? (Drinks again.)

JERRY (much surprised).—Thou drinkest well for so unlearned a youth. But come, thou wilt get drunk; besides, I thirst myself.

BILLY.—A matter easily settled, has need of no dispute. (Produces a knife.) Come, cut this hose in two and then you both can drink. (DAN and JERRY drink.)

DAN.—Ha-ha-ha— I, haze an ideas—s- fellows-s- just cuts each half in two. and then we all can drinks—at once, ha-ha-ha—! (Drinks again.)

BOSE.—An eye both good and keen! (All drink.)

DAN.—"Tish true—ha-ha-ha!—verily—I once could shee—(hic)—shee but one beer keg—(drinks)—and now (hic)—now I can—shee—shee—sheven—ha—ha—ha—a good eye?— Why (hic) man—alives—I shee in (hic)—yonder rock—sheven times—(hic) the golds—(hic) you—shee (drinks)—(hic)—(hic)—!!!!!!—(falls).

* * * * *

(Others keep on drinking.)

BILLY.—Dish—fuse—must (hic) be going—off—(hic)—off—in—my —inshides—my (hic) head—my (hic) head—explodes—!!!!—(falls).

* * * * *

(Other two keep on drinking.)

JERRY.—Ishe—dis—cas (hic) tle—going—'round—Look out (hic)
 now—stheady—now—boys—(hic) stheady—hold tight—!!!!—(falls).

* * * * *

(BOSE still drinking.)

BOSE.—And—I—I—even—I—only—(hic) am—left—ha! ha!! ha!!!
 —!!!!!! (falls.)

SCENE II.

NEXT MORNING. Many attendants around, and much excitement. The custodian has discovered the excavation, and pulled out the four men. No explanation can be offered, either for the passage, or for the inebriety of the men.

GRAND DUKE drives up in his chariot, and a long discussion follows.

GRAND DUKE (at length concludes).—This mystery surpasses comprehension. To drown their sorrow in drink—go mad—and grovel on the ground! We must revoke the council's hasty action—take back these men, and teach them sense,

To the Chapel Bell.

WITH deep reflection,
But no affection,
I often think of that Chapel Bell;
Whose sounds not few, do
Seem like a "hoo-doo,"
As it rings in my window, sweet slumber's knell,
On this I ponder,
And often wonder,
Would we grow fonder, oh bell, of thee;
If we did not hear you,
Or were not near you,
If you were silenced eternally?

Why should we heed you?
We do not need you,
Your echoes do not sound sweet at all:
Yours is the summons,
O'er tower and commons,
That hastens us laggards to Packer Hall.
When on awaking,
Sweet slumber breaking,
Your voice heart-quaking glides in so free;
I'd like to steal you,
Or at least conceal you—
Confound it!—there you are calling me.

R.

A Retrospect.

AFTER the summer's over,
After hotels all close,
My heart is again a rover,
Awaked from love's repose.

After my heart sure gaining,
She dropped it in the fall ;
And there's nothing now remaining
But a snap shot on the wall.

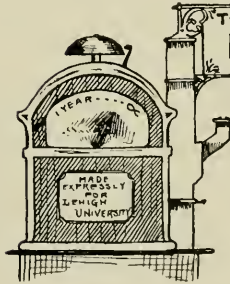

A Sure Thing.

NO sun may rise to-morrow morn,
And Christmas may not come again,
Perhaps Columbus ne'er was born,
Nor Shakespeare ever saw a pen.

What man can prove the grass is green,
Or that the moon is not green cheese ?
Will Judgment Day be ever seen ?
Does Heaven exist or—what you please ?

Though all these things are held as facts,
Yet naught is certain here below,
Except this slot machine, which acts
With speed, the surest thing I know.

DROP A "PONY"
IN THE SLOT
AND SEE YOURSELF FIRED.

RECEPTION TO OUR NEW PRESIDENT.

A College Banquet.

The banquet is in progress. The sixteenth course is being served. Champagne flowing freely. Waiters are serving cocktails for the toast of the evening, "Our New Prexy."

B-SE F-RG-SON, (Toast-master) (rising):—Gentlemen, we have already drained our glasses for all the toasts save one. But this last toast shall be the grandest of them all. Let us drink to "Our New Prexy," bottoms up. (All empty their glasses.) I have the honor of introducing to you the distinguished guest that has come to assume the duties of first officer of our University—The Honorable Bob F-tz-mons, B. S., Ph. D., D. D., M. D., U. J. D., F. C. S., F. G. S. A.*

PRESIDENT F-TZ-MONS:—Mr. Toastmaster and Gentlemen, I grasp the opportunity with avidity, and I shall do it justice, you can bank on it. Gentlemen, Alexander, the first champion prize fighter of the world, could not have been more proud; the forty-eight inch chest of Columbus could not have swelled with more satisfaction; Napoleon in the tip-top of his corking career could not have felt more swagger, nor walked on more tacks; the great and only James J. Corbett himself could not have been more stuck on his shape when he landed on his last opponent's jaw, than is yours truly on this "looloo" occasion.

I am glad to have become the ruling power, the cock of the walk of such a dandy gang. All my titles are N. G. aside of that which has just come in this last prize package.

Gentlemen, I am dead on to the serious pickle of my office. Its responsibility lays book-making and bottle-holding way in the shade.

* B. S., Billiard Shark; Ph. D., Phenomenal Drinker; D. D., Dog-fight Director; M. D., Manipulator of Dukes; U. J. D., Unfailing Judge of Drinks; F. C. S., Fighting-Cock Society; F. G. S. A., Fakir General of Salvation Army.

The future of this young and energetic University rests upon my shoulders. I feel like a hen with a new egg, and, Gentlemen, it shall be well hatched. I never have skinned a friend nor faked a race, and I will back my pals to the end. And I'll not now ruin my "rep."

Many things have come to mind in the way of improvements as I take a seat in this little game. I am here to state that not only shall the absence system and compulsory chapel take a back seat like some other relics, such as the 2:40 record, the 15 oz. boxing glove, and all other slow rackets; but there are going to be courses in all the branches of science that are the straight thing for the proper education of the young American sport.

The entrance examinations shall hereafter include a test of capacity in the liquid line, which will make every successful applicant a good Le-high man. Charlie's shall take the place of Billy's as prep. school, and the brewery on the hill will be opened as a new department in the University.

Gentlemen, athletics seem to be on the decline. They shall hereafter be first on the track. If any team wants money, come to me; or if a pitcher, or center-rush, or goal-tender is needed, come to me, for I have been there, you can bet, as records will show.

The manly art of self defence shall be revived, and I myself shall manage that department. Gentlemen, there must be more excitement in college life. The building on the north-west corner of the campus must be enlarged so that we can send out a fine breed of dogs and game chickens to build up a record in that line of the noble sporting world.

But, Gentlemen, I am taking too much of your time; so I will close my remarks with this toast—MAV THE LEHIGH SPORT BE EVER ON TOP. (Great cheers and applause.)

B-SE F-G-SON, (rapping on table with a bottle):—Order! Order there, Gentlemen! Thesê fine sentiments should not go unappreciated. Prexy, we thank you for your noble words. They are like a flickering spark kindled into fire; the realization of an almost vain hope. Our joy is overflowing, and I'll call on Pop to verify my statement.

(Cries of "Pop Br-y!" "Br-y!" "Br-y!" "Come on!" "Wag your tongue," etc.)

BR-Y:—I am too full for utterance——

B-SE :—Well, I've drunk more than you, and I'm all right.

D-RN-N:—You fellows are not half sporty enough for me. Waiter, bring me a glass of absinthe. (Waiter collapses.)

BR-Y (continuing):—Well, we'll not dispute the point. It is not my purpose to make a glowing speech, but who with any college spirit—or other spirit if you choose—could restrain the uprisings of an inner fire which needs only the patriotic speech of our President to make it burst forth into a flaming effusion.

SH-P-Y:—Oh, Pop, don't !

U-D-RW-D:—Let her go ! Whoop !

BR-Y:—Gentlemen, have we not here a man who, in every sense of the word, is in sympathy with the Lehigh sport? A man who has enjoyed the good things of life? One who can tell a good Manhattan from a Marteni, or a Bock from a Tannhauser?

ME-R-TT:—Sha-s-sh-shs right.

GA-RIO:—And—don't—you forget it.

BR-Y (continuing):—A man that advocates no compulsory chapel, no examinations, no study. Then will Lehigh reach the maximum point of prosperity. We'll play ball by day, and visit the ladies by night.

T. WIL-N:—In view of the last thing, I think it would be a good idea to move the University to Allentown. The girls are nicer up there.

S-SS-R:—Well, the girls in Bethlehem are plenty good enough for me.

FA-S-N:—I much prefer not to have any Allentown additions to Lehigh's 400.

TR-FT-N:—Well, fellows, to settle this dispute, let's throw up for it. (Considerable excitement. Sh-pl-y starts to play steam car with his chair around the table, and Th-m-son sings "Dony love shortnin'.")

BR-Y:—Fellows, these interruptions are particularly embarrassing to so timid a youth as I am. I wish to say only one more thing in endorsement of Prexy's idea of athletics. I think that this is a turning-point in our existence.

McCL-G:—Well, I for one, think I'll turn back and take two years extra in foot-ball, and I think that every man on last year's team ought to do the same.

W-DEN:—Well, you don't catch this chicken, 'cause I don't think the students appreciate what foot-ball men do, and how much they work. It's no fun to go out every day and practice, and be knocked down every five minutes. In the three years that I have played foot-ball the man opposite me has in nine cases out of ten been from fifteen to twenty pounds heavier, and yet I have never complained. I have suffered physical pain—that is, I have felt the surgeon's knife, and I shall bear its marks to the grave.

(Prolonged applause. Ord-y starts to whistle, and the rest sing, "Listen to my Tale of Woe.")

P-YNE (after the noise ceases):—Speaking of Athletics, I think they should be run on a more economical plan—like the musical organizations, for instance.

F-RR-D-Y:—That's right! We are going to give a concert on the Thirty-first, and I want you all to come.

M-H-RG:—I, for one, think the constitution ought to be changed, and I have the following amemdments to offer:—

BR-KS:—Please insert some clause giving me the privilege of looking over the books. I like to know that things are run all right.

PET-T:—Oh say! I heard a story the other day that I want to tell you. Ha! ha! ha!

GIB-GA:—That's nothing, I can tell a bigger one.

PET-T:—Ha! ha! ha! haw! haw! haw! hee! hee! hee!

J-NES:—Is that the point?

(A general motion is made to leave, and in a moment Pet-t is left alone to laugh at empty bottles.)

Dutch Justice.

ONCE on a time a game was won,
'Twas a great victory ;
And here you have the ground upon
Which Krouskopf earned a fee.

The grave and reverend seniors bore
A more cheerful dignity ;
Even the blasé juniors wore
A smile 'twas good to see ;
The frisky freshmen shouted and swore
And laughed and jumped with glee ;
The bold bad sophomores did more,
They organized a spree—
A virtuous, musical jambouree
With only a sprinkling of beer,
To suitably honor the victory,
The first—and the last—of the year.
From this scene of innocent merriment
A student pursued his way,
He soberly went with decorous intent
For it approached the Sabbath day.
But, alas for his plans, he was spied by a cop,
Who called Old Mike to his aid ;
And together they summoned that student to stop,
Perforce this request he obeyed.

Then they hustled him into a dingy cell
 Where weary walkers are kept,
 And it's not unlikely he'd be there still,
 And certainly there he'd have slept—
 For those cops had sworn that vengeance they'd take,
 That they'd "even things up with 'them' boys";
 These arms of the law, having been kept awake
 By the unlawful singing and noise—
 But late though it was, one learned J. P.
 Had not yet sunk into repose,
 And hearing the racket and smelling a fee,
 Straightway this justice uprose—
 And when he had found what it all was about,
 Said, "I t'ink I might gif him a trial,"
 Intimating, however, too plainly for doubt
 That the students must make it worth while.
 So the "arms of the law" had to bring forth their prey,
 From the depth of the tramp's retreat,
 To have sentence pronounced without delay
 By the Squire on the judgment seat.

* Within the hall of justice, eight by ten,
 Crowded the lately merry college men,
 Where 'twixt his guardian cops stood the accused
 Facing the stern J. P., who sat and mused,
 Elbow on table, pensive, hand on brow,
 Impressing all with timid wonder how
 That head contained the knowledge it must hold,
 And how that single hand could be so bold
 To rest there with familiarity.

• Breaking the awful silence, then said he :—
 "Orter in t'e court! I'm going to show
 You fellows t'at t'ere's somet'ings you don't know
 Already yet. Now officer you state
 T'e grount of t'is arrest, for it's too late

*Ed's note: Our poet here changes his metre to suit the dignity of the subject.

For decent peoples to be out of bet.
What is t'e charge? I'll hear it to-night yet.
You swear to tell t'e truth? Now kiss t'e buck."
And then his Honor cast a searching look
To read the prisoner's guilt, or to divine
His capability to pay a fine.

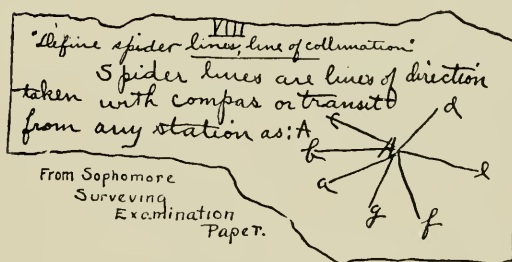

The prosecutor then roused up and said :—
“ Houses was shut up and peoples was in bed
And I could take some rest. When all the street
Was quiet, I was waked up on my beat,
I heard some singing, then I seen them boys
Go marching down and making all the noise ;
And, when I started after and caught up
I told them this here racket it must stop ;
And then this fellow here he slandered me,
And on his way home got arrested—See ?

“ Now, prisoner, haf you anyt'ing to say ?
If t's is so t'en you will haf to pay.
You don't teny ? T'en you admit it's true ;
Well, t'en, I only haf one t'ing to do.”
Then his Honor with dogmatic paw
Proceeded thus to demonstrate the law :

“ You haf been guilty of a heavy crime,
You robbed t'e police of his sleeping time
And t'at is what t'e law calls larceny.
We hold it is assault and battery
To disturb t'e police in any way
For t'at is what our statutes plainly say ;
Now, you haf called him names and made some fun,
And it's for slanderous words t'at he has run
You in ; and if you joke at his expense
He has to make arrests in self-defence.
You poys must learn t'e laws if you live here,
And to behave, as well as to trink beer,

Or else you'll find t'at we know what is what,
 And t'en you'll get what you won't like, py Gott.
 I'll make it light, ten dollars fine will do
 And all t'e costs—what's t'at small sum to you?
 As soon as you haf paid up what you owe
 You'll be discharged, and t'en you all can go."
 So spoke the Court, unprejudiced, profound,
 And when he'd made an end the hat went round
 To gather up the money for the fee
 And pay the costs and set the prisoner free,
 Remunerate the cops for loss of sleep
 And compensate the Justice learned and deep.
 When all were paid the court adjourned, and then
 The students wended homeward wiser men.

A MISCONCEPTION.

DR. RINGER (calling the roll on the first day of the term): "Mr. Du Barry."

DU BARRY, '95: "Here."

DR. R. (looking around): "Mr. Du Barry."

DU B.: "Here, sir."

DR. R.: (discovering his presence): "Ah, Meister Du Barry, you have changed your face."

LUCKENBACH, '97 (to librarian): "Have you got Harper's Young People?"

MR. WENDLE: "What is the difference between an insulator and a conductor?"

WRIGHT, EX '95: "Do you know, fellows, I have a menu for ponying."

ILLIG, '97: "Is book work a study of gymnastics?"

HESS, '96: "I don't blame the instructor for not knowing it. I don't understand it myself."

MR. FERGUSON: "Ich habe zwei Bier bestellt."

ILLIG, '97, (indignantly): "Ordway doesn't want the 'Varsity to have their picture taken with us."

FWEDDY BIGGIN: "Who stole my bicycle?"

MR. FERGUSON (in German): "Mr. Morgan, did you hand in a prose exercise last time?"

MORGAN, EX '95: "No sir, I was absent."

MR. FERGUSON: "You should have handed one in anyway."

BARTHOLOMEW, '96: "There are lots of stars you can't even see with a microscope."

BROOKS, '95 (to a little Dutch boy): "Say there, wie weit nach Bower's Rock?"

DUTCH BOY: "Do you mean, how far is it?"

CODY (in Physics): "Mr. Moore, if the rays of light from two different stars were to cross, wouldn't there be chemical action?"

CALLAGHAN, '95: "Dr. Shober, what is the composition of tungsten?—sort of an organic compound, isn't it?"

JACOBY: "What was the name of that Frenchman who wrote Æsop's Fables?"

STOCKER (in debate): "Who of us would like to spend four years in a nunnery? (meaning monastery)."

PROF. DOOLITTLE (to man at board): "Mr. Wigfall, that figure represents nothing in Heaven above, or the Earth beneath, or the Waters under the Earth."

MILLER, '94: "I think that any man who gets his name in the gags is pretty rank."

ALLGAIER, '94: "The High School Club was organized for the benefit of the Lehigh University."

KAUTZ, '95 (examining ancient bronze coins): "Doctor, why did they paint these things green?"

LOOMIS, '96: "But say, fellows, if the Freshmen had a class supper, would we dare to eat it?"

STOCKER (in French, reading a sentence): "Mademoiselle votre mère est-elle á la maison?"

INSTRUCTOR: "Mr. Stocker, why don't you say Madame?"

STOCKER: "Can't my mother be Mademoiselle as well as Madame?"

SUPERINTENDENT OF IRON WORKS (to a Junior Mechanical on Shop Visit): "Say, do you know who that suspicious looking character is wandering about here?"

JUNIOR: "Why, he's one of our men." (Dan Webster).

SUPER: "Well, it's a good thing I asked you, for I was within an ace of firing him out for some tramp."

CLINTON, '97: "There is no bad whiskey; there is good whiskey, better whiskey, and best whiskey."

LIVINGSTON, '96: "Had that sweater washed in my first Freshman year!"

SCHUMAN, '97: "In this problem, x and y vanish spontaneously."

SIMPSON, '96: (in Mechanics): "Mr. Lambert, is the radius of the earth 4000, or 40,000 miles?"

HESS, '96, (in Agora): "The man who cannot appreciate the beauties of Analytical Geometry cannot appreciate the beauties of a Shakespeare or a Milton!"

INSTRUCTOR BROWN (after wrestling for about an hour with a simple problem in Elementary Mechanics, makes the following startling announcement): "Well, we know that the sum of the angles of a triangle equals one hundred and eighty degrees."

(Roar from the class.)

MR. BROWN: "No, no, I don't mean that!"

MR. RIGGS: " $\frac{\pi}{4}$ is a quadrant, isn't it?"

CHORUS FROM CLASS: "No, that's wrong, it's $\frac{\pi}{2}$ "

MR. RIGGS, (rattled): "Well, we'll assume it's correct."

KLINE, '96 (using dictionary in German exam.): "Mr. Ferguson, I can't find this word anywhere, er—I mean I can't remember it."

TYPICAL SO. BETHLEHEM MATRON (overheard in street car): "Dis ride ain't wort' five cents, ain't it? Say not."

KAUTZ, '95 (after the Lehigh-Toronto Lacrosse game): "There was another big shipment of gold from the United States yesterday, only it was Lehigh gold this time."

STOCKER, '95: "Who was the author of Ovid?"

CODY (at Lacrosse game, as Symington catches the ball): "Now you've got it, Symington, now you've got it."

MOWLDS (sotto voce): "Well, Cody, keep still, I guess he knows it."

JUNIOR: "The best example of class spirit that I have ever seen, is shown by those few Sophomores who will persist in wearing those detestable class caps."

MR. FRYE (instructor in philology): "I have just heard a new derivation of the word restaurant. It comes from 'res,' thing, and 'taurus,' bull—a bully thing."

INSTRUCTOR: "How much does a pound of steam weigh?"

UNDERWOOD: "I don't know, sir."

MR. SPANUTIUS (to a party of students during poor water season): "I never drink the water here myself; I find beer much more healthy. I would advise you fellows to do likewise."

MR. LAMBERT : " Mr. Powell, what is Sturm's Theorem ? "

POWELL, '96 : " A masterpiece of logic, and a monument to the sagacity of its discoverer."

FARMAN (examining a steam engine): " I wonder what runs this."

COLEMAN : " I shouldn't be surprised if it were steam."

RODERICK (to Patsy at the post-office) : " Say, Reddy, got any mail for me ? "

ALLGAIER : " There will not be any trees on the campus after Easter—they are all going to leave."

THOMPSON, '97 (watching Hefflefinger in foot-ball practice) : " That freshman plays as though he knew something about it."

BLEHL, '95 : " I know I'm not liked by all the boys, but then I have an awfully high reputation with the faculty."

QUESTION IN ROMAN HISTORY CLASS, TO SIEGEL : " What relation was Cæsar to Sulla ? "

SIEGEL, '95 : " Why—he married Sulla's wife's daughter's sister by her former marriage."

KIP, '95 (during foot-ball season): " Is Ordway back yet ? "

JOHN, '95 : " Oh no, Kip, he's only half-back."

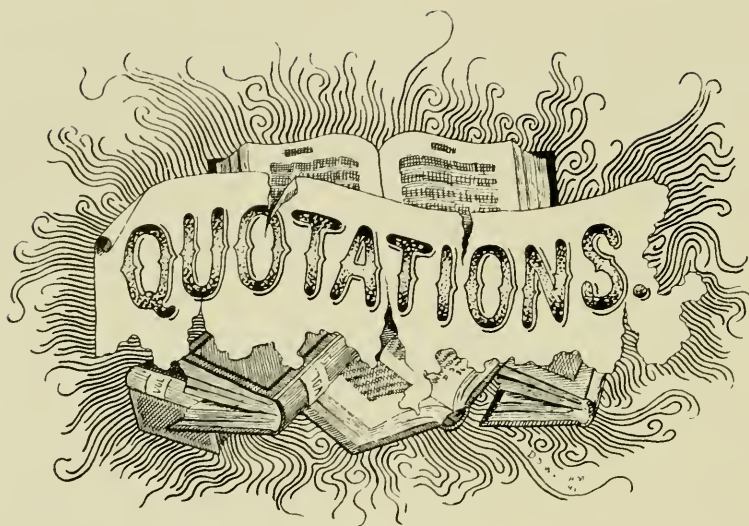

MR. SEMPLE : " Mr. Budd, have you prepared your oration ? "

BUDD, '95 : " No sir, I can't write one of those things. I can't catch on to the flowery style, and high-flown language that the other fellows write theirs in."

LEE, '97 : " What are they hauling coal to the boiler house for ? I thought they heated the buildings by steam."

SESSER, '96 : Doctor, how is it you have so many o's down for me ?

DR. RINGER : For euphony's sake, Mr. Sesser—euphony's sake.

MANKIND :

“He that knows and knows that he knows is a wise man ;
He that knows and knows not that he knows is a stupid man ;
He that knows not and knows that he knows not is a sensible man ;
He that knows not and knows not that he knows not is a fool.”

WHITMOYER, '95 :

“I kiss whom I please, and please whom I kiss.”

O'HEARN, '94 :

“What strange things we see when we haven't our gun.”

BRAY, '94 :

“‘Knowest thou not me?’ the deep voice cried.”

JOHN, '95 :

“Harmless youth, meant only to exist.”

DR. COPPÉE :

“Nor was his name unheard or unadored.”

KLINE, '96 :

“With the odor of the forest,
With the dew and damp of meadows.”

FARMAN, '95 :

“Up from the meadows rich with corn.”

MR. CRAMER :

“Est-ce-que vous appelez cet chose là un homme ?”

HILL TO PACKER HALL :

“With many a weary step and many a groan,
Up the high hill.”

STRATFORD, '94 :

“I am a masher, I am.”

GIVEN, '96 :

“’Tis better to be vile than vile esteemed.”

MR. LAMBERT :

“Forsooth ! a great arithmetician.”

IRVINE, '95 :

“Give salutation to my sportive blood.”

MATH :

“All uphill work when we would do,
And down hill when we suffer.”

JERRY PHILIPS, '95 :

“His tongue is hung in the middle Wagging at both ends.”

LIVINGSTONE, '96 :

“Insidious in this naughty world of ours.”

SIGISON, '95 :

“I would that star would disappear, were ’t only for a season.”

LEWIS, '96 :

“With what a graceful tenderness he loves,
And breathes the softest, the sincerest vows.”

LACKEY, '95 :

“Whose follies, blazed abroad, to all are known,
And are a secret to himself alone.”

MITCHELL, '96 :

“He is exactly five feet, six inches in height, and six feet, five inches in circumference.”

- WEBSTER, '95 and RANDALL, '97:
 "What's in a name?"
- BIEBER, '96:
 "Behold the child, by Nature's kindly law, Pleased with a rattle, tickled with a straw."
- STRICKLER, '96:
 "Wie schöne Mädchen sind im Allenstadt!"
- WEIDEMAN, '9 (?):
 "To stumble twice against the same stone is a proverbial disgrace."
- MILLER, '95:
 "Charge, Chester, Charge!"
- RANDALL, '97:

 "Although he is a little lad,
 He chins and chins to beat the bad."
- OBERLY, '96:
 "Ah! I thought it was a being."
- BLEHL, '95:
 "Half his days were passed at church,
 The other between his tutors and confessor."

LEWIS, '95:

"So black an eye, so glib a tongue, and yet an honest face."

THURSTON, '96:

"He's a roistering, jolly good fellow,
And always prepared for a fling,
And yet has one failing accursed—
He thinks he is able to sing."

ELMORE '94:

"I do admire nice little men.

DOORS TO PACKER HALL:

"With impetuous recoil and jarring sound,
The infernal doors, and on their hinges grate harsh thunder."

SHIPLEY, '94:

"Sawed off, chewed up, spit out, and hammered down."

ARCHITECTS:

"Poor patient, quiet, honest people."

W. T. BROWN, '95:

"God bless the man who first invented sleep!

KEYS, '96:

"Seven hundred pounds and possibilities are good gifts."

"A pair of Kids."

LANNON, '95:

"Och, you schwate boy! "

PUTNAM, '96:

"Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear."

PITTIS, '96:

"I cannot eat but little meat,
My stomach is not good ;
But sure, I think that I can drink
With him that wears a hood."

CLINTON, '97 :

"To sleep, to eat ; perchance to drink—
This is existence."

- DICKERMAN, '96 :
 "Beautiful in form and feature,
 Lovely as the day ;
 Can there be so fair a creature
 Formed of common clay ?"
- THORNE, '9 (?) :
 "Unthinking, idle, wild and young,
 I laughed, and danced, and talked, and sung."
- ILLIG, '97 :
 "I do begin to perceive that I was born an ass !"
- THE PONY :
 "A very gentle beast, and of a good conscience."
- THE FRESHMEN :
 "Green as the bay-tree-evergreen,
 With its new foliage on."
- MURRAY, '95 :
 "Stately and tall he moves in the hall,
 The chief of a thousand for grace."
- DIVEN, '94 :
 "This melancholy flatters, but unmans you."
- FAISON AND CASTLEMAN, '95 :
 "Together let us beat this ample field,
 Try what the open, what the covert yields."
- KAPPELLA, '95 :
 "None but himself can be his parallel."
- FREDERICK JOHN VAN BENTHEM VAN DEN BERGH, '95 :
 "Tho' short my stature, yet my name extends To heaven itself, and earth's remotest ends."
- TIDBALL, '96 :
 "If he despises all men, it is because he has studied himself."
- KNIGHT, '94 :
 "A courier of the midnight air."
- OBERLY, '96 :
 "I wept when I was born, and every day shows why."
- E. J. RIGHTS, '95 :
 "On nature do not lay the blame, but mourn the place he came from."
- CLASSICALS :
 "No doubt but ye are the people, and wisdom will die with you."

- BEST, '95 :
 " His name describes him ' best.' "
- BRATTON, '96 :
 " Methinks I am becoming a god."
- MR. RIGGS :
 " If he had two ideas in his head they would fall out with each other."
- WEIDEMAN, '96 :
 " For the man was, we safely may assert,
 A thing to wonder at beyond most wonderful."
- THE REGISTER :
 " Thick as the galaxy with stars 'tis sown."
- HOLZ, '94 :
 " A town that boasts inhabitants like me,
 Can have no lack of good society."
- KLINE, '96 :
 " I must go to the barber's, for methinks
 I am marvelously hairy about the face."
- S. BALDWIN, '96 :
 " To him, as wise as Solomon,
 Seems the image in the glass,
 While others looking in it
 See naught but the perfect ass."
- WILSON, '94 :
 " Here Satan said, ' I know this man of old,
 And have expected him for sometime here.' "
- HENSHAW, '94 :
 " He rarely or never goes out,
 And abhors what you call the gay world."
- KENNEDY, '97 :
 " 'Tis, alas, his modest, bashful nature and pure innocence that make him silent."
- J. PHILIPS, JR., '95 :
 " Men even when alone, lighten their labors by song, however rank it may be."

STOTT, '97 :

“And though he talks but little,
’Tis a good deal more than he thinks.”

“He thinks he’s a devil of a fellow, but he ain’t.”

SYMINGTON, '97 :

“Mamma’s baby boy.”

WEIDEMAN, '96 :

“See’st thou a man, wise in his own conceit,
There is more hope for a fool than for him.”

CHETWOOD, '95’:

“He meant no harm in scribbling ; ’twas his way,
Upon all topics.”

PAYNE, '94 :

“The man was a phantasmagoria in Himself—he was so volatile and thin.”

HARNED, '96 :

“And the little boys by the fireside ope’d wide their mouths at his tales of wondrous adventure.”

GLADING, '94 :

“Who can foretell for what high cause
This darling of the gods was born.”

BROOKS, '95 :

“Had I been present at the creation, I could have given some useful hints for the better ordering of the universe.”

ROELKER, '97 :

“That fellow seems to possess but one idea, and that is a wrong one.”

ADAMS, '97 :

“Untamed, untried from Southern wilds.”

LEHMAN, '96 :

“Brass impregnable.”

P. H. S. C.:

“They saw not in themselves aught to condemn ;
Each was the other’s mirror.”

- OBERLY, '96 :
 "The more intently the ghosts gazed, the less
 Could they distinguish whose the features were ;
 The devil himself seemed puzzled even to guess."
- ARBENZ, '95 :
 "And scribbles as if head clerk to the Fates,
 Who knows to what his ribaldry may run."
- J. S. MILLER, '95 :
 "A pretty lad, but bursting with conceit."
- AMADOR, '97 :
 "Of beasts it is confessed the ape Comes nearest to the human shape."
- HENRY, '95 :
 "He knew well the taverns in every town."
- GRISWOLD, '97 :
 "A blockhead rubs his thoughtless skull
 And thanks the stars he was not born a fool."
- BETHLEHEM JUSTICE AND STUDENTS :
 "Society is divided into two classes, the fleecers and the fleeced."
- LOOMIS, '96 :
 "Whenever that man means nothing, I advise him to say nothing."
- CODY, '95 :
 "It is easier to be critical than correct."
- PENNINGTON, '97 :
 "Why so pale and wan, fond lover ?
 Prithee, why so pale ?"
- W. S. AYRES, '96 :
 "Never seem wiser or more learned than the people you are with."
- L. U. C. A. :
 "So far above the cunning powers of Hell
 Its guardian angel had given up his garrison."
- BIGLER, '95 :
 "It pains me to recount his career."

- BRADY, '97 :
 " You doubt his sex, and take him for a girl."
- DEKAY, '96 :
 " I'm called away, but I leave my character behind me."
- MARCK, '97 :
 " Nature himself started back, when thou wert born, and cried,
 'The work's not mine.'"
- ROS-Y-JANE, '96 :
 " Excellent is culture for the savage."
- MR. MEAKER :
 " He was in logic a great critic,
 Profoundly skilled in analytic,
 He could distinguish and divide
 A hair twixt south and southwest side."
- ORDWAY, '94 :
 " I'm not in the roll of common men."
- VAN BRUNT, '96 :
 " I drink no more than a sponge."
- E. E. COURSE :
 " A delusion, a mockery, and a snare."

 " I would be none save what I am."
- BUEL, '94 :
 " Hush my dear, lie still and slumber."
- HISS, '95 :
 " A man crossed with much adversity."
- RE-RE-RE-RE :
 " 'Twas a victory; yes, but it cost us dear."

'93 LACROSSE TEAM:

"First in the race that led to glory's goal,
They won and passed away—is this the whole?"

BROWN, '94:

"Who never said a foolish thing,
And never did a wise one."

MRS. LUCAS:

"Of all tales, 'tis the saddest and more sad,
Because it makes us smile."

SIGISON, '95:

"Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted."

MARSHALL, '97:

"He left a paper sealed up, wherein were found three articles as his last will; 'I owe much, I have nothing, I give the rest to the poor.'"

FEM. SEMS. :

"T'were worth ten years of peaceful life,
One glance at their array."

KENNEDY, '97:

"His very foot hath music in 't
As he comes up the stairs."

MURRAY, '95:

"Great man! the natives gazed and wondered much."

LEE, '97:

"Thou wilt scarce be a man before thy mother."

POND'S EXTRACT.

If you wish to take REGULAR DAILY EXERCISE, and not be compelled to desist from work because of SORE MUSCLES, you must, after exercising, THOROUGHLY RUB the MUSCLES with POND'S EXTRACT. By its use you are made QUICK and ACTIVE, and ALL SORENESS, STIFFNESS, or SWELLING is prevented, and you will AVOID the DANGER of TAKING COLD on going out after exercising.

We have a book full of testimonials from the most famous athletes; to quote them is superfluous. Almost everyone in training uses it. But don't expect some cheap substitute for POND'S EXTRACT to do what the genuine article will, for you will surely be disappointed. Manufactured only by
